

RALPH
MCGILLHow Close
Is War?

How close are we to war? Close.

What are the chances of escaping it? There is a chance. But it is narrow.

We can see that Gen. Matthew Ridgway made a masterful tactical recovery from the Chinese breakthrough, which by all odds should have meant defeat. That it was enormously damaging may be seen from the pressure now on the lines being drawn back to protect the flanks exposed by that first-hour breakthrough.

We can also see, as the battle goes badly, and Chinese reserves continue to arrive, increasing public demand for action. The retreat will coincide with the Senate hearings, at which Gen. MacArthur will testify.

Question

The paradox is that all Americans yearn to strike at the Chinese, and many wish to implement immediately the MacArthur policy. The purely military aspect of it is sound. Gen. MacArthur was right as to that. None will differ with him. But the political aspects cannot be divorced from it. The American people want to strike at China—but do not want war. There's the paradox. The American people must understand what the consequences are.

Extending the war to China goes directly to but one point. How far can Red China be contained by the war in Korea, by bombing North China, and by coastal raids by Chiang's troops if it is possible to equip, transport and supply them—without bringing in Red Russia?

Gen. MacArthur glossed over this in his magnificent oratorical contribution before the Congress. He minimized, but did not eliminate the danger. "The Soviets will not necessarily mesh its actions with our moves," he said.

Sen. Taft has said the nation must not be stopped from adopting the MacArthur policy by "any possibility the Russians may come into the war."

Consequences

Also, the American people must be prepared to face the consequences of war, should it come, because the plain fact is we are not ready to fight a war, especially on two fronts.

This was what Defense Mobilization Charles E. Wilson was saying to the nation last week when, speaking to newspaper publishers in New York City, he said that within three years we would be strong enough to "insure peace."

Sen. Taft, for all his virtues, is one of our prophets with the most erroneous record. He was sure Hitler meant us no danger. A brief few weeks before Pearl Harbor he was saying it was stupid to say there was any threat from Japan. He voted against retaining selective service.

We must—as a people—face the fact that heavy involvement in Asia would mean the loss of Europe and allies there.

But—destiny being what it is, may inexorably drive us on. The UN is not functioning because Russia will not allow it. The United States is carrying the burden. No end in sight. There are frustrations. Leadership in Washington is inadequate and inarticulate. And Gen. MacArthur is an officer, doing a job not done so effectively since Marc Antony made his oration over Caesar's body.

But, let us be sure we know the consequences.

Bus Crash

WEIRTON, W. Va., April 29—(UP)—Seven persons were killed and 50 were injured Sunday when a runaway bus loaded to capacity with churchgoers ran wild down a mile-long hill and crashed into a concrete retaining wall.

Weirton police said the brakes of the bus, operated by the Pittsburgh and Weirton Bus Co., apparently failed about halfway down the mile-long grade and the vehicle began picking up speed.

Joseph Kraini, 35, the driver, wove in and out of traffic, his horn blasting, as he attempted to bring the heavy vehicle under control. He was unable to make a right-angle turn at the foot of the hill and the bus crashed into a concrete wall.

Kraini was killed in the crash and his body was hurled 300 feet by the force of the impact.

Most of the passengers were thrown to the front of the crumpled bus in a tangled mass. Workers from the Bus Company garage located only a few feet from the scene of the crash, used acetylene torches to free the passengers.

Several passengers were treated at the scene and sent home. Forty-three were admitted to Ohio Valley hospital but seven were discharged after treatment. There

Rail Crossing

BARBERTON, Ohio, April 29—(UP)—A tank car traveling 60 to 70 miles per hour rammed a 33-ton Sherman tank at a grade crossing Sunday, killing three of the five National Guardsmen in the tank.

All cars of the Erie Railroad's Chicago-New York train bounced off the tank as the Diesel engine smashed into the armored vehicle. It struck the tank a glancing blow, ripping off one track, the turret and the 75-millimeter cannon and dragging them along the tracks.

One of the surviving tank crewmen was injured seriously. The other leaped from the turret to safety before the jarring collision. Five members of the train crew were hurt slightly and two of the 80 passengers were injured. Only one passenger was hospitalized.

The dead men, members of the 137th National Guard medium tank battalion, were Ronald Peterson, 19, Barberton; William Livingston, 22, Doylestown, Ohio; and Dale Cox, 27, Akron, Ohio. A fourth man, Carl Nichols, 21, of Akron, was seriously injured and the other three died instantly.

The smashed tank was the first one a tank column homeward bound from maneuvers. Lt. Paul Bolin, who was leading the column, had stopped the column while one train passed and had then walked to the crossing to make certain all was clear before waving the tanks ahead.

As the leading M-4 lumbered onto the crossing, the Erie's "Lake Cities Express" sped out of the mist and rain which had limited the lieutenant's vision and hit the train.

The tank's new Diesel engine, the tender and the six cars jolted off the tracks and tilted at precarious angles.

TO SET NATIONAL PATTERN

Bond Leaders Arrive
For City's 'Defense Day'

Principals who will launch a national Defense Bond drive here Monday—including the man charged with administering the nation's finances—had arrived Sunday night and were braced for a busy "Atlanta Defense Day."

Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, whose plane was delayed en route, was the last to arrive.

His eye shaded against light because of a recent eye operation, Secretary Snyder recalled this is one of many visits to Atlanta where he "has many friends."

"We are going to have to have additional taxes," Snyder said in an interview. "We have a balanced budget for the fiscal year ending, but that will rapidly fade away when the new fiscal year starts July 1."

Snyder opined the new taxes would be made up largely of corporate, excise and individual income taxes. He said Congress feels that a proposed increase in capital gain taxes is "equitable" and added "we should be hearing from Congress on the subject in the next week or 10 days."

He was enthusiastic about the Defense Bond program and pointed out there are more bonds outstanding today than at the start of the fighting in Korea.

"The program at this time is largely conducted on a payroll savings plan basis," Snyder said, "but we still are putting pressure on their overall sale."

The Cabinet member, longtime friend of President Truman, said he hoped Defense Day here would "set a pattern" for the entire nation. May has been designated Defense Bond Month and the campaign will be waged across America.

Snyder was joined at the Ansley Hotel where he spent Sunday night by his nephew, Maj. Neil N. Snyder, who will serve as his aide during his stay here. Major Snyder is stationed at Fort McPherson.

Others who will take part with Snyder in day-long campaigning here had arrived earlier. They included Asst. Sec. of the Treasury John S. Graham; Vernon L. Clark, national director of the Savings Bond Division; Dick Powell, radio, screen and stage star; Piper Laurie and Tony Curtis, Universal-International stars.

Chic James, Miss Defense Bond 1951, and Francis, mule mascot for the newspaper carriers' part of the rally, also will participate. Miss James and Francis entertained newsmen Saturday after their distributed bond applications with newspapers. Next week end the newsmen will collect the applications.

Powell, who arrived late Saturday, sunburned from a day of golf and looking natty in a navy blue suit, said he was looking forward to serving as master of ceremonies on a half-hour CBS broadcast that will originate from a luncheon of leaders of the drive.

Curtis and Piper Laurie arrived here fresh from a personal appearance tour in North Carolina where Miss Laurie said in two days she "developed a Southern accent." Curtis said this will be his first bond rally and he was "really flattered they asked me down to help out."

Highlight of the day will be one of the biggest parades in Atlanta since "Gone With the Wind." More than 3,500 people, 75 military and private vehicles and 15 bands will participate. It will be a kind of farewell appearance

1,500 Marines
Back, 'Take'
Coast City

SAN DIEGO, Calif., April 29—More than 1,500 cheering Marines landed here Sunday from Korea and took the city by storm.

They came ashore from the U.S.S. Sgt. Sylvester Antolok, third shipload of rotation draft from the Korean war front and the first to dock in Southern California.

A crowd estimated at 1,500 lined the Navy pier to welcome the returning Leathernecks.

Among them were hundreds of relatives—mothers, fathers, wives, brothers and sisters. They strained their eyes gazing across the sunlit San Diego Bay for first glimpses of the converted victory ship bringing home their loved ones.

Scores of small craft met the Antolok off Point Loma to escort her to the pier with wildly screaming sirens and boat whistles.

Fireboats in the harbor loosed welcoming jets of water. Luxurious yachts sailed by, their masts carrying "Welcome Home" on banners flapping in the breeze.

First man off the ship was Maj. M. R. Olson, senior Marine Corps officer aboard.

He was closely followed by Lt. J. R. Fisher, the most-decorated fighting man in the group.

Navy bunting was colorfully bared along the pier in festive greetings.

Welcoming ceremonies were brief. But the family reunions were hysterical and moist-eyed.

Short welcoming remarks came from Mayor Knox of San Diego, Rear Adm. Wilder D. Baker, 11th Naval District Commandant; Maj. Gen. William T. Clement, commander of the Marine recruit depot, and Maj. Gen. A. H. Noble of Camp Pendleton.

A Marine Corps band assembled on the pier broke into the Marine Corps Hymn and Leathernecks lining the ship's rail cheered mightily.

As the Marines moved down the gangplank they faced a battery of cameras, then walked through an honor guard in dress blues to waiting arms of their relatives.

Tobey Sees
Kayo Blow
In Report

By CLAYTON KNOWLES

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON, April 29—Sen. Tobey, Republican, New Hampshire, said Sunday that the third interim report of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, due Tuesday, will "put a crimp in the style of a good many criminals across the country."

He said this was particularly true of a recommendation bearing on income taxes but he maintained the report contained "three or four solar plexus blows" aimed at crime lords, any one of which could produce a knockout.

The Senator would have expanded on this point, and, in fact, asked if he might. He was restrained by Sen. Estes Kefauver, of Tennessee, the outgoing chairman, who said he did not think it would be fair to give more committee work must be on getting legislation passed that would break up interstate crime.

Kefauver did agree, however, that the tax law is "an integral part of getting at the big-time racketeers."

LEGISLATIVE AIMS

The exchange occurred as four members of the committee, making a joint appearance on the television, "American Forum of the Air," unanimously agreed emphasis in the next phase of the committee's work must be on getting legislation passed that would break up interstate crime.

Sen. Alexander Wiley, Republican, Wisconsin, declared that the work load ahead would "make it practically impossible to schedule hearings more than once or twice a month."

I agree with Sen. Wiley," Kefauver said, "that the first thing to do now is to try to press for legislation to stop the use of interstate commerce in the furtherance of organized crime; to try to break it up, reduce it to a lower level, a local level, so that local people can more adequately deal with it."

The members also appeared unanimous for legislation to control racing wire service, described by one as "Public Enemy No. One in the Country." Sen. Tobey said he did not think such action would break freedom of the press.

LAWYERS HIT

Sen. Lester C. Hunt, Democrat, Wyoming, warmly supported by other committee members, declared it was "high time" the states and bar associations consider disbarment for lawyers whose practice is built upon advancing organized crime.

"Any attorney defending a crook knows the source of his fee," Hunt declared, "and to my way of thinking, when he participates in those ill-gotten gains and protects a known criminal he is certainly not doing a service to society although he may be getting a good fee."

Rudolph Halley, chief counsel to the committee, denied again in another telecast program that the report was being toned down in any way, particularly with respect to crime conditions in New York under former Mayor O'Dwyer's administration.

O'DWYER HIT

He replied: "Absolutely not!" when asked if senators decided to "tone down" a portion of the report which said O'Dwyer failed to take effective action against heads of the gambling, narcotics, waterfront murder and bookmaking rackets, thus contributing to the growth of organized crime.

Russell for

WASHINGTON, April 29—Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, said Sunday that hearing on Far East foreign policy getting under way this week would be aimed at giving the public all possible facts possible on the controversy that led to the dismissal of General of the Army MacArthur from his command.

The Defense Department has already been asked to declassify as much "secret" material as it can and the senator, who will head the inquiry, indicated he might give military authorities some argument if they don't loosen up sufficiently.

"If they bring in something I don't think is top secret, they will have to convince me that it is," declared Georgia Democrat, as he discussed the much-heralded investigation.

SESSION TODAY

The Armed Services Committee of the Senate, which Russell heads, will meet at 9:30 a. m. Monday with the Foreign Relations Committee to discuss the hearing. If all goes according to plan, the two Senate groups, with Russell as chairman, will open the inquiry with testimony from General MacArthur Thursday. Whether he will testify in open, or closed session, is still to be determined.

The general, it was reported, plans to fly down from New York on Thursday to appear before the joint committee, and to return to New York by plane later that day.

Later, Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall will give the committee the administration's version of the developments in the Far East, and so will members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who, according to Gen. MacArthur, agreed with him on the strategic plans for conducting the Korean war. This statement of the general's has, itself, become a point of controversy.

Sen. Russell's promise to bring out all possible information on the Far East situation appeared to have the full co-operation of the Defense Department. Officials there gave assurance last week that they would make a full disclosure of documents, and an official announcement made it clear that the Joint Chiefs of Staff would make known without reservation their position in the controversy.

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley is chairman of the Joint Chiefs. Other members are Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army; Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force.

A bold decision to defend the battered old Korean capital was announced Sunday by Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, United Nations ground commander.

It had been expected that Allied forces would withdraw to the south banks of the Han River, which curves around Seoul's southern outskirts. But Van Fleet said Seoul's historic significance justified its defense. The rubbled, nearly deserted city has no military value.

Allied artillery ringing the ancient capital poured thousands of heavy shells into the Chinese shock troops of an estimated Red army of 600,000.

OPENING STAGE

This was the opening stage of an expected massive Chinese assault aimed at seizing Seoul by Tuesday—the Communist May Day holiday.

On the central front, Allied forces abandoned Chunchon, 45 miles northeast of Seoul, and took up new defense positions to the south along the Pukhan River.

On the eastern front, the U. S. Eighth Army communique reported only scattered contact with the Chinese and Korean Reds.

In the Seoul area, two Allied companies were reported surrounded Saturday night but a tank-infantry task force rescued them Sunday morning.

The Red radio at Pyongyang, the North Korean Red capital, said that Chinese forces Sunday night were within 7½ miles of Seoul.

Allied forces have previously been located on a defense perimeter four miles north of the city. But censors refused Sunday to permit correspondents to pinpoint the defense line in greater detail.

PUNCH BACK

United Nations forces punched back at Chinese forces northeast of Seoul Sunday. One tank force plunged north of Uijongbu, 11 miles above Seoul, and shot up a force of some 1,000 Reds before being forced back to UN lines.

With Red pressure increasing Monday, the full weight of the Chinese assault on Seoul was expected to be felt Monday night and early Tuesday. U. S. Fifth Air Force planes spotted 3,360 Red vehicles streaming toward the battlefield—most of them in the built-up area immediately north of Seoul.

In the heaviest night aerial strikes of the Korean war, the Allied fighters and bombers attacked 1,000 vehicles. They re-

God-Given Duty to Destroy
Communism, Vogeler Says

VIENNA, April 29—Apparently more shaky than when he was released from a Budapest prison, Robert A. Vogeler broke off a television broadcast Sunday after having warned that what had happened to him behind the Iron Curtain "could happen to anybody."

Vogeler, 40-year-old executive of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company, who served 17 months of a 15-year sentence in solitary confinement on his conviction for espionage, was in worse shape Sunday than when he arrived at his home here Saturday.

Reaction had set in and he admitted he felt very shaky. He awakened at 6 Sunday morning after only five hours' sleep because it had been part of his prison routine. He sat in the garden for a time but a stream of curious passers-by began to file past his house. Four Vienna policemen saw that they did not enter it.

When Vogeler was asked to speak and pose for television this afternoon he said at first that he had nothing to say. Then he changed his mind.

"Yes," he said, "I will say something. I have a message to give to the American people. God has given us a mission to destroy Communist enemies of freedom. It is very important that the American people be made aware of what can happen. I feel that every individual American should realize that what happened to me could happen to anybody. We should band together to destroy these enemies of individual freedom, of independence and liberty, and the right of a man to go where he wants without hindrance by authority or police; to be able to go to bed with an easy feeling, not thinking that he may be taken away in the middle of the night from his family into prison.

"It is a mission God gave us to perform so we can live in peace and happiness. It seems so short a time ago when we were fighting for the Four Freedoms..." At this point Vogeler choked up, his voice trailed off and he broke off the broadcast to re-enter his house.

When Vogeler will leave for the United States depends on his health. The intention is to send him there as soon as possible.

GENERAL TO PLAY SECOND FIDDLE

Murfreesboro to Hail Mrs. MacArthur

By BILL DIEHL

MURFREESBORO, Tenn., April 29—Not since the tired remnants of General Rosecrans' Union Army trudged into this quiet, mid-Tennessee town on January 2, 1863, has the arrival of any figure created such furor as the anticipated return of Mrs. Douglas MacArthur.

On the eve of her pilgrimage to Murfreesboro, the town's 16,000 citizens have donned the town in its Sunday best, speckled it with the stars and bars of the Confederacy, put a razor edge on their own Southern hospitality and settled back to await what promises to be, at least, the most momentous occasion in their history.

Adenauer's Party Wins German Vote

Election Results Hailed As Schuman Plan Nod

By RICHARD K. O'MALLEY

FRANKFURT, Germany, Monday, April 30—(AP)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's Christian Democrat Party was victorious Sunday night in a state election regarded as the first public test of the Schuman plan.

Adenauer's party, which supported the plan, received 564,393 votes in the state parliamentary election in the Rhineland-Palatinate, French zone state, according to the official count. The Socialists, who oppose the plan, received 488,391.

Adenauer has already signed the French-sponsored plan, which now awaits action in the federal parliament at Bonn. There is approval, even stiff opposition from the Socialists on a national level.

Both the big parties used the plan, which calls for the pooling of Western Europe's coal and steel, as their biggest campaign issue in the Rhineland-Palatinate. Adenauer, himself, went into the state to speak for his party and the Schuman Plan.

It was the first time that the plan in any of the six Schuman Plan countries had an opportunity to express approval or disapproval, even indirectly as in this case, on the proposal.

Election officials said 75.1 percent of the Palatinate's 2,015,518 eligible voters had turned out before the polls closed at 6 p. m. (noon EST).

In apparently giving approval to the merger plan, the predominantly Catholic Palatinate received 62,462 votes, representing 4.4 of the total and not enough to win a single seat in the state legislature. The Socialists, who won a seat, a party must have a minimum of 5 percent. In the last election in 1947 the Reds won two seats.

Election officials corrected an earlier announcement, saying there will be 100 seats in the state parliament instead of 101. They said the discrepancy had resulted from a merger of two 1947 voting districts.

Although the Christian Democrats won, they lost five of their previous seats, dropping from 48 to 43. The Socialists advanced from 34 to 38 seats. This is partly explained by the Communist failure, which left seven seats vacant. Observers explained that many votes which previously had been cast for Communists apparently went to the Socialists.

The Conservative Free Democratic Party went from 11 to 19 seats. Some observers expect a coalition of Christian and Free Democrats, similar to the grouping governing West Germany at Bonn, to emerge from the voting. Up to now the state has been controlled by a Christian Democrat-Socialist coalition.

Germans Trading Illegally With Reds to Be Penalized

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

FRANKFURT, April 29—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer Sunday declared that business firms trading illegally with Iron Curtain countries would be deprived of necessary raw materials. He also asserted the West German Federal Republic is ready to take any joint measures which might lead to an end of all Western trade with Red China.

The measures announced by the federal government Sunday are part of a general movement against communism in Western Germany and the communist-run German Democratic Republic in the Soviet zone.

Three communist organizations, including the potent Free German Youth Organization, were banned in North Rhine Westphalia Saturday and Hamburg also has banned similar Communist Party organizations.

IMPORTANT STATEMENT

These measures, taken to avert trouble during the May Day celebrations and to check the communist offensive built around their plebiscite against West German rearmament, probably will turn out to be less important in the long run than that of Dr. Adenauer's statement Sunday.

For there is evidence in Berlin that the five-year plan for the German Democratic Republic, on which many of the Russians' political and economic hopes for Germany are based, rests largely on an expectation of a brisk trade, legal and illegal, with Western Germany.

There are plenty of grounds for Soviet optimism. Despite repeated protests by American and British officials in Bonn, a flourishing illegal trade has developed through Berlin to the Eastern zone.

DUMMY CONCERNS

Moreover, German industrialists, fully conscious of what they are doing, have been selling strategic materials to dummy concerns in France, Belgium, the Netherlands and French North Africa. These shipments have been sent on to the Soviet Union and its satellites.

The illegal trade amounts to about $238,000,000 a year and includes such items as steel, 300,000 tons in a year, machine tools and electrical equipment.

"If this trade can be halted," a high American official said recently, "there is absolutely no

India Wheat Bill Due for Heated Debate

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—Chairman John Kee, Democrat, West Virginia, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Sunday predicted "a tough fight" on the House floor this week over a bill to rush 2,000,000 tons of American wheat to famine-stricken India.

President Truman has appealed for approval of the measure to save "millions" of Indians from threatened starvation. But a House bloc, headed by Rep. Eugene E. Cox, Democrat, Georgia, is fighting it on the ground that India has opposed U. S. diplomatic policies in the Korean War.

Kee said the bill faces an uphill battle despite a major concession to its opponents in putting the $190,000,000 emergency air program on a loan, rather than a gift basis. A companion "gift-loan" measure is pending in the Senate.

Cox served notice that he will seek to link opposition to the bill with opposition to the Far East policies of Secretary of State Dean Acheson. He said he will tell the House that "a vote for this bill is a vote of confidence in Acheson."

INFANTRYMEN OF UNITED NATIONS ARMY TURN AGAIN SOUTHWARD
"There Was Grandeur in Those Dragging Steps, and There Was Steel in Their Eyes."

Foot Soldiers, Retreating, Don't Like It, Aren't Beaten

By JIM BECKER

CENTRAL FRONT, Korea, April 29—(AP)—There was almost no sound as they plodded. Just the steady plump, plump, plump of boots being planted in the dust, raised and planted again.

They were a pitiful sight but there was also grandeur in those dragging steps, and there was steel in their eyes.

It takes about three minutes for a jet plane to streak from Hwachon to Hongchun.

Even on roads so crammed with dust that vehicles use headlights in the daytime, a truck can make the trip in half a day.

It took these foot soldiers four days to slog over the tortuous mountain trail that leads from the one battered collection of mud huts to the other.

The troops took six hours out to sleep and another night to fight. The rest of the time they walked.

The Marines were indescribably filthy because there has been no time to wash. They were unshaven and unkempt. Their clothes were caked with mud.

One night it had rained. Mixed with the sharp odor of days old sweat was the musty stench of wool that has been soaked and then not quite dried.

They walked up roads that would have tried a mountain goat, under loads that would have staggered a piano mover.

They did not know why they were walking south because they knew they had not been beaten. Some had heard their flanks had given way and that was why they were heading the wrong way.

Whatever the reason, they did not like it.

Most of the men stared at the packs of the man in front—at the raincoats and sleeping bag and trenching tool and grenades and weapons of the man ahead.

They were bent under their burdens.

Sweat streamed freely from their faces and mingled with the dirt and black beard stubble to form filthy droplets.

But the things you noticed most were the eyes.

There was steel in them and there was nothing phony about it. It was the hardness of men who have lived with death and watched their friends fall bleeding to the ground.

And as I looked into their eyes, I thought they said:

"Other men may smell better than we do and have fresher clothes, but we know our families may be longer and their families may be longer and their families may live in the big houses up on

Chinese Seize British Firm's Oil Property for 'Security'

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

HONG KONG, April 29—Premier Chou En-Lai issued an order Sunday requisitioning all oil stocks, installations, barges, tank cars and other equipment owned in China by the British Asiatic Petroleum Co. It was the first seizure by the Chinese Communists of property belonging to a British concern.

A news dispatch of the New China news agency announcing the confiscation said the property was being taken over by the Peiping regime for reasons of "national security" and "in the interests of the public." This was similar to the language used April 7 by Hong Kong government when it ordered requisitioning of the 15,000-ton Yung Hao, a Chinese oil tanker claimed by both Communists and Nationalists.

Although Premier Chou did not mention the Yung Hao, the timing and the language of his confiscation order suggested the property of the Asiatic Petroleum Co. was being seized in an act of reprisal. The disputed tanker, with a Royal Navy crew aboard, was towed out of Hong Kong after the British took physical possession of the vessel here April 12 by lowering the flag of the Chinese People's Republic and ordering the pro-Communist Chinese crew ashore.

Subsequently, deputy foreign minister Chang Han-Fu in Peiping denounced the seizure of the tanker as a "provocative act" and a "clear case of robbery." He said China would hold the British "responsible."

The main office of the British concern and its branch offices were exempt from the requisition order. Thus it appeared the Communists were taking the company's physical assets and still leaving it with the burden of settling severance pay with its employees.

There was no sign that the property of any other British concern was being confiscated. All promptly in China belonging to the United States government and American companies was seized by the Peiping regime last Dec. 21.

The U. S. farm plant—land, buildings, livestock and equipment is estimated to be worth about $91 billion.

Eleven Crash Victims Taken From Wreck

FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 29. (AP)—Eleven mangled bodies were brought out Sunday from a muddled field where a United Airlines plane crashed and exploded Saturday night in a violent thunderstorm.

The eight passengers and crew plunged to their deaths as the big DC-3 plane twisted, turned over on its back, a 300-ton mass of wreckage in the field between two thickets. The big plane had been approaching for a landing at Baer Field, the Fort Wayne municipal airport, two miles west.

The sudden fury of the wind and thunderstorm had resulted in three successive sets of instructions to the pilot, Capt. E. K. Swallow, Hinsdale, Ill.

As the plane headed in from Cleveland, the Baer Field control tower had given him one set of landing instructions when the wind direction changed. Neal Rupert, tower man, then radioed the plane to land on another runway.

But, before the airliner could reach the field, the storm broke. Some gusts of wind blew in at 80 miles an hour. The lower level of the plane to turn back east to miss the storm. A few moments later, Rupert saw an orange flash to the east.

Henry Facks, 62, farmer, said he saw the plane flip and plunge into the stubble field. Then he said, "there was an awful explosion."

Three of the passengers were nurses on their first plane ride returning from a psychiatric clinic at Massillon, Ohio. They were Treva Swihart, Argos, Ind., and Ann Lehman and Barbara Scheid-egg, both of South Bend. Another victim was Dr. H. Clive McAlister, 57, medical director of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., Fort Wayne.

Maurice J. Oyer, project engineer of the Wayne Pump Co., was returning to Fort Wayne from Cleveland. Also killed was Maurice Mahon, 25, Cleveland FBI agent.

United Air Lines identified other passenger victims as Keith Farr, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Stanley Telecz, Detroit.

Crew members killed with Captain Swallow were first officer H. R. Miller, and stewardess Beverly Ellis, both of Chicago.

United Air Lines said the crash was their first fatal one in three years.

Bipartisan Foreign Policy Revival Doubted by Taft

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—Sen. Taft, Republican, Ohio, said Sunday the prospects of reviving the bipartisan foreign policy are dim because President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson "won't make any concessions" to the Republicans.

On the other hand, a top Democratic senator, McMahon, of Connecticut, said he thinks some Republicans will co-operate with the administration on foreign policy. These GOP members, he said, "are able to make judgments that are not determined by partisan motives."

As chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, Taft speaks with the loudest individual GOP voice on foreign policy since the death of Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan.

The Ohio senator told a reporter that so far as he is concerned, the bipartisan policy of which Vandenberg was the chief congressional exponent, has been out of circulation since President Truman won the 1948 election.

"Only in a single case—the Atlantic Pact—has there been anything remotely resembling consultation with the minority party on any major program," Taft said.

"I don't see much hope for it so long as Truman remains as stubborn as he is. He and Acheson won't make any concessions to the Republican point of view."

"Their idea of a bipartisan policy is to announce their own decisions and expect all Republicans to support those decisions."

McMahon said he doesn't see how the administration can provide any wider consultation with the Republicans than it is attempting now.

"Secretary Acheson has reported day after day to congressional committees," he told a reporter. "He has given us all the information we have wanted. The minority on the committees has had access to the facts."

Taft called in the Senate last week for Acheson's resignation or removal, asserting that he doesn't think there can be any unity on foreign policies until the cabinet member goes.

While he hasn't answered this publicly yet, Acheson is taking steps to build up his defenses within the Democratic ranks. He has had Democratic senators as his guests at weekly dinners at his home, answering freely the questions of the half-dozen who attend each time.

Bank Profit Tops in '50, FDIC Says

$937 Million Net,
13 Percent Gain

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—Bank profits in 1950 were the greatest in history, Maple T. Harl, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), said Sunday.

Reports from the 13,448 FDIC-insured commercial banks showed net profits after taxes amounted to $937,000,000, a 13 percent gain over 1949, he said, adding:

"Stockholders of the banks shared directly in this prosperity with record dividends of $391,000,000 or 42 percent of net profits after taxes."

The profits after taxes, Harl said, represented "an average of 27.72 percent on basic common capital and 8.51 percent on total capital accounts, the highest rate of profits since 1946."

The FDIC chairman described dividend payments to common stockholders as equivalent to "a direct return of 11.45 percent on this stock, the highest dividend payment in the history of the Corporation (FDIC)."

"On May 12," Harl said, "we will cross the threshold of the eighth year in which there has been no receivership of an insured bank nor a penny's loss to any depositor in an insured bank. This represents an all-time record for depositors' safety in this nation."

He declared that loans—which the Government has lately been trying to stem for anti-inflation purposes—reached at the end of 1950 the highest point ever up to that time.

The loan rise accounted for most of the gain in bank earnings—gross current operating earnings were an unprecedented $3,931,000,000—as the average rate of return on loans advanced "slightly" to 4.34 percent.

Total income from loans rose 14 percent over 1949 to a $2,008,000,000 total, while interest on U. S. Government securities was practically unchanged at $1,015,000,000.

"Income from other securities increased by 12 percent and service charges on deposit accounts by nine percent, but together these sources provided only about a tenth of total current earnings," Harl said.

Income taxes took a stiff rise, almost one third. They totaled $428,000,000. Losses, charge-offs and transfers to reserve accounts came to $367,000,000.

CIO Leaders Lists Changes Labor Seeks

Georgia's top CIO leaders, meeting here during the weekend, enumerated changes labor will ask when the Defense Production Act is reconsidered by Congress before its June 30 expiration date.

Five of the CIO's prominent officials, speaking to a crowd of Georgia workers, in the Atlanta city auditorium listed eight requests labor will make to Congress "in the interest of unity in time of emergency."

Charles H. Gillman, State CIO director and president of the Georgia Industrial Union Council, presided.

William H. Crawford, director of District 35 of the Steelworkers' Union, said the Office of Price Stabilization has approved margins of profit that will result in higher prices and asked for "dollar and cents ceilings—real price control to prevent profiteering within the law."

Thomas J. Starling, regional director of the United Auto Workers, called for re-enactment of "tight rent controls to assure adequate defense housing for workers in critical areas."

Elwood P. Haines, director of the Gas Coke and Chemical Workers, said the system of "freezing wages and salaries without controlling the cost of living is oppression."

Earl Moye, director of the State's communications workers, voiced protest to any plan of a federal sales tax. Concluding the program, Charles Mathias, president of the Atlanta Industrial Union Council, said the primary responsibility of the new Defense Production Act "rests squarely with Congress."

Shah Forced to Appoint Oil Nationalist Premier

Anti-British Bloc Wins All Points

By ROBERT B. HEWETT

TEHRAN, Iran, April 29—(AP)—Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi bowed to the will of Parliament Sunday night and decided to appoint F. Mohammed Mossadegh, popular leader of the Anti-British oil nationalization bloc, Premier.

An informed court source said a Royal Farman (decree) appointing Mossadegh to succeed the resigned diplomat Hussein Ala probably will be signed Monday.

Final legislative action is expected to be taken Monday night by the Senate on a bill to take over the British-owned Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. The lower house (Majlis) unanimously approved the measure Saturday night. The Senate received it Sunday and agreed on a special session to vote on it.

Legislative leaders said there is not the slightest doubt the Senate will pass the Nationalization Bill, which has been protested strongly by both the British government and the Anglo-Iranian company.

As Premier, Mossadegh would have only seven seats for his national bloc out of 136 in the Majlis. The murder early in March of Premier Gen. Ali Razmara, Iran's "strong man," who bitterly opposed nationalization, has produced terror in the hearts of the deputies. The national bloc, always more powerful than its actual numbers, has swept all before it.

ported knocking out at least 200. Fighters from carriers in fast task force 77 joined in the close support missions. Rear Adm. R. A. Ostie estimated carrier planes had accounted for 6,500 Red casualties since last Sunday.

70,000 CASUALTIES

The Communists have lost an officially estimated 70,000 of the 300,000 shock troops that began the offensive. They have been pouring in reinforcements from a nearby 300,000-man reserve pool. The estimate of over-all Red casualties was made by Gen. Van Fleet after a series of visits to frontline positions. He made clear that the week-long withdrawal of Allied forces—the rolling with the Red punch—had stopped north of Seoul.

He said no house-by-house defense of the city was planned but that it would be defended on a broad perimeter to the north. Seoul has been abandoned to the Red invaders twice before.

The Russian-equipped North Korean army easily took the city after they started the Korean war last June 25.

SEUL ARMED CAMP

It was liberated by the Allies last September after the Inchon landings on the west coast. Then it fell to the Reds again in January after Red China's entry into the war changed the picture.

The Eighth Army retook the city without a fight March 15 in the series of limited offensives against the Chinese.

Field dispatches said Seoul was now a grim, armed camp.

The greatest immediate threat to the city was reported as coming from Red agents among the civilians remaining in Seoul.

More than 250,000 civilians have fled southward and 150,000 more refugees from the north passed through Seoul in their flight south. Seoul once had a population of 1,500,000.

Woman Reporter Of War Honored

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Marguerite Higgins, Korean War correspondent for the New York Herald Tribune, was named Sunday to receive the Overseas Press Club of America's top honor, the George Polk Memorial award.

The club's president, Louis P. Lochner, said in a statement that Miss Higgins would receive the $500 prize for having demonstrated "courage, integrity and enterprise above and beyond the call of duty."

Augusta Child's Death Ruled Murder by Police

AUGUSTA, April 29—(AP)—The Augusta police department announced Sunday that sufficient evidence had been found by the detective department to brand the death of Lois La Verne Jones, 7, as murder.

The theory of accidental death has been ruled out, it was announced by Chief of Police F. B. Green and Detective Chief William Terry.

The child's body was found in the Augusta canal last Friday morning. She had been missing from her home here since Saturday night a week ago.

The officers did not express an opinion on the manner in which the child met her death. They did say, however, that enough evidence has been found to convince them the child had met death before being tossed into the muddy stream.

An official report from Dr. Herman Jones, Director of the Fulton County crime laboratory, who viewed the body Saturday and conferred with officers later, will probably be made in a few days. Dr. Jones viewed the body after an autopsy had been held by local physicians Friday afternoon at which time it was reported that the body bore no evidence of foul play.

25 Epileptics Defy Police With Clubs

NEW CASTLE, Ind., April 29—(AP)—A mob of 25 epileptic patients, armed with baseball bats, held police off almost three hours Sunday at the Indiana Village for Epileptics.

After officers persuaded the leaders to drop their clubs, only one casualty was reported. Chester Shadday, an employee of the institution, was hit over the head with a bat. He was taken to Henry County Hospital for X-ray examination and then released.

Dr. Walter C. Van Nuys, village superintendent, blamed the disturbance on a discharged attendant, Porter Burgess, 60, who was taken to the Henry County jail and booked for investigation.

Dr. Van Nuys said he fired

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Mon., April 30, 1951 • 5

Burgess about noon Sunday for returning to the grounds drunk early in the day. When Burgess refused to leave, Dr. Van Nuys said, he called Sheriff Robert Padgett.

The superintendent said Burgess, instead of leaving, went to one of the dormitories at the village, a state institution, and incited patients there to come to his defense.

The sheriff said he took the two leaders of the mob to jail at their own request "until things quieted down." However, he said he got no satisfactory explanation from them on their reasons for the disturbance. They were not charged.

The mob was gathered outside the brick building, known as Colony 2, when the officers arrived—eight state police, Sheriff Padgett and a deputy, three city police and an ambulance driver.

Padgett said he and two state police—Detectives Bert Dillon and Sgt. Fred Forsy both of Connersville—approached the leaders and persuaded them to drop their clubs.

were 57 persons aboard the runaway bus.

"It happened so quick that we didn't actually see the accident," one of the rescue workers said. "First we heard the horn blowing and the scream of tires as Joe tried to make that corner. Then there was the crash. It even shook the ground. He must have been doing 70 miles an hour when he plowed into that wall."

Father Thomas Carrigan, pastor of St. Paul's Catholic Church about 500 feet away from the crash, heard the noise and halted services. He ran to the scene where he administered the last rites of the Catholic Church to a number of the victims.

DRIVER KILLED
Most of the dead and injured were taken to the Ohio Valley Hospital at Steubenville, four miles away. One of them was taken to Gill Hospital in Steubenville.

The dead, in addition to Krainl, were identified as Mrs. Elsie Ullio, Mrs. John P. Kulow, Peter Balt, Alpha T. Smith, 13, Mrs. Ageline Winkles and Mrs. Florence Hinkle, 40, all of Weirton Heights. Mrs. Hinkle died of a fractured skull shortly before midnight in Ohio Valley Hospital, Steubenville, Ohio. Three other persons were reported in very critical condition at the hospital.

Police said the bus was loaded with residents of the suburban community en route to various Weirton churches and was on a regular run when the brakes apparently failed.

John Stunda, 16, Weirton Heights Central Catholic High School junior, who suffered a broken arm in the crash, told of the wild ride from his bed in Gill Hospital.

"I knew we were going to crash but there wasn't anything I could do about it. When we hit, I blacked out. When I came to, everybody was screaming."

"I tried to help my brother, George, but I couldn't because my arm hurt. Then my pal, Kenny Tronti, broke open a window. Some man pulled me out because I couldn't help myself. I couldn't hear what he was saying to me because everyone was screaming so loud."

New Synthetic From Bile Detects Cancer Presence

By WILLIAM H. LAURENCE
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution
CLEVELAND, April 29—Synthesis of a new substance which, when mixed with human blood serum, has revealed the presence of cancer with an accuracy of more than 98 percent in a large number of cases tested thus far, was reported here Sunday at the closing sessions of the annual meeting of American Association for Cancer Research, Inc.

The new synthetic substance, the first of its kind, is prepared from a bile fraction known as deoxycholic acid, the same substance now being used as the starting material from the manufacture of cortisone. It promises to bring closer to realization the long-sought-for goal — development of a simple and easily applied diagnostic test for cancer. Such a test could be used in the mass screening of the population for detecting cancer in its early or incipient stages, when it is still a curable disease.

The new substance, when produced in quantity, promises to break the bottleneck that has stood in the way of the large-scale use of a similar test announced at this meeting last year by the same group of investigators. Until now the test substance could be derived only in very small amounts from the liver of patients who have died of cancer. This scarcity of the substance, and the difficulty of obtaining human liver tissue from deceased cancer patients, made the test impractical from the point of view of screening the entire population.

The synthesis was carried out at the University of California School of Medicine at Los Angeles by a team of investigators headed by Dr. Harry S. Penn, associated in the studies. Regarded as among the most significant in the cancer field in recent years, were Drs. George C. Hall, Andrew H. Dowdy, A. W. Bellamy, F. X. Byrnes and Claude S. Mumma. The studies were carried out at the Tumor Control Center, Surgical Service, Wadsworth General Hospital and the Veterans Administration Center and departments of radiology and surgery, of the Medical School.

When the new synthetic substance is mixed with the serum from a subject in whom cancer is present, the California scientists reported, the serum curdles in the manner of the curdling of milk on being mixed with lemon juice. When no cancer is present no curdling takes place.

The investigators found that the curdling takes place in the early stages of cancer. About 830 cases of known cancer were studied at first with the substance obtained from human liver, and of these 98.6 percent gave a positive reaction, the scientists reported. More recent tests with the synthetic substance, they reported, gave similar results, showing that the artificial substance could be used to the same advantage.

The test is based on the hypothesis, originally proposed by Dr. Penn several years ago, that cancer is produced in the body by a natural substance present in the liver and other tissues, which is eliminated in normal persons but is allowed, for reasons unknown, to accumulate over the course of years in some persons, who develop cancer at a result.

This substance X, described as a carcinogen, produces antibodies in the blood of those individuals in whom it is accumulated, in an effort by the body to neutralize the toxic cancer-producing agent. While these antibodies manage to hold the cancer-producing agent in check in the initial stages, according to the theory, their production is gradually decreased to the point at which the cancer agent can do its damage unopposed.

According to this theory, the blood serum of all those individuals in whom cancer is present, even in the early stages, contains the anticancer antibodies, created in an effort by the body to fight off the cancer. These antibodies combine with the cancer-producing agent (carcinogen), known under the general term, antigen, and defang it. Hence, when the cancer-producing antigen is combined with the serum from the blood of a patient in whom cancer is present, the antibodies present in the blood serum combine at once with the antigen and coagulate it.

On the other hand, when the serum from a patient in whom no cancer is present is mixed with the cancer-causing antigen no coagulation takes place, since no antibodies are present.

170 Billion Gallons Daily Water Usage

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—Americans used 170,000,000,000 gallons of water daily last year in their homes, farms, factories and business establishments.

The geological survey, supplying this estimate, figured it amounted to 1,100 gallons a day for each person.

"An additional 1,100,000,000,000 gallons per day were used to generate hydropower," it said.

Sabbath Beer Case Books 29 At Tech Grill

A group of Georgia Tech students was among 29 persons booked early Sunday when city detectives found the Tech Grill at Spring Street and North Avenue, N. W., selling beer in violation of the city beer and wine ordinance, police reported.

Detectives J. E. Sikes and R. A. Boone said they saw several young men stagger out of the darkened grill between 12:15 and 12:35 a. m. Sunday. They reported seeing the bartender serving beer, several men sitting around drinking it, and at least one man carrying out cans of beer.

Charges of violating the beer-and-wine ordinance and operating a dive were placed against the grill's manager, listed as Nathan Leff, 35, of 1245 Spring Valley Lane, N. E., and Ira B. Patterson, day.

Well-Known Pianist H. S. Truman To Receive 88-Key Spinnet as Gift

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—Harry S. Truman, the well-known piano player, is going to be given a unique one May 9.

Assembled jointly by the country's major manufacturers out of raw materials from far-flung parts of the world, it is a specially designed spinnet with a full keyboard of 88 keys.

Presentation of the gift is to be part of a ceremony opening National and Inter-American Music Week. President Truman is chairman of the week-long celebration, intended in large part to show the role of music in the Armed Forces' morale and recreation programs.

Thomas E. Rivers, president of the National Recreation Association, sponsors of the week, said of the piano-spinnet: "South American mahogany, Australian wool for the hammers, steel strings and castings from this country, as well as nickel from Canada, are included in the piano's construction. It will be the only piano of its design to be made."

Jr., 21, bartender, who gave his address as Tech.

A waitress, Ann G. Arbuckle, 23, was booked for being an occupant of a dive. Two men, one of whom gave a Tech address, were charged with buying beer on Sunday.

In addition, the detectives said 24 other persons, about three-fourths of them Tech students, were charged with being occupants of a dive.

A hearing is set for 4 p. m. Monday.

Snow Plows Reach 200 Fishermen

FRESNO, Calif., April 29—(AP)—Rescuers Sunday cut through deep snowdrifts to reach some 200 fishermen marooned all night on State Highway 180, and 55 miles east of here.

The fishermen had gone into the Sierra Nevada mountains Saturday on the first day of the trout season. An unexpected heavy Spring snowfall caught most of them as they attempted to return Saturday night.

Since resorts afforded shelter along most of the highway, they never were in great danger.

But officers, deluged with telephone calls from anxious wives and families, mobilized snowplows and tow-truck crews to reopen the highway. After an all-night fight they reached the marooned sportsmen.

Snowplow crews said the snow, still falling at noon Sunday, had reached a depth of three feet.

Trolley Injures 152 Viennese

Every time your oil man delivers a gallon of gasoline or fuel oil to you—he sets in motion a chain of events reaching to distant oil fields. Your purchase is registered through a sensitive system of Co-ordinated Distribution, which balances supply with demand.

Your gallon sets the "chain" in motion

No matter where you live, from Maine to California, your call for any oil product has its echo hundreds or thousands of miles away. The fact that your use is multiplied by millions of other people—in thousands of places—means that the chain of distribution must be kept going 24 hours a day every day.

To deliver the required 290,000,000 gallons of petroleum products "to your door" daily, the petroleum industry has developed its own special system of transportation. Your gallon sets it in motion.

Making oil more useful:

Oil contributes in hundreds of ways to the nation's economy, comfort, protection. It produces more than half of America's power.

Co-ordinated Distribution is another example of how the oil industry gets the maximum usefulness out of our petroleum supply.

And oil companies, to do this, work on 3 fronts: production, refining and distribution.

Joined to serve you best

Production finds new oil fields, gets the most possible oil from existing wells.

Refining gets more and better products from every gallon of crude petroleum.

Distribution anticipates the users' needs, and delivers the product where and when it is needed.

With production, refining, and distribution all joined "under one roof"—teamed to exchange ideas—Shell does its part to assure the most efficient flow of petroleum products to you.

To strengthen America:

Because they have plowed back over 10 billion dollars into new plants and equipment since the end of World War II, America's privately managed oil companies outproduce the world—are better prepared today than ever before to meet both civilian and military needs.

JEAN'S DAY

celebration the townspeople have ever planned, they are watching their town grow to boomtown proportions. The tree-shaded streets are bedecked with 15-foot intervals with Confederate flags trembling from ropes stretched curb-to-curb. The conservative demeanor of the town has been shattered by a deluge of people from all parts of the nation.

Oddly enough, the most curious spectators are the townfolk themselves. They have watched wide-eyed as the invasion began, at first with a trickle and then with the steadily mounting tempo of a deluge. They have seen their street corners into hucksters' stands, its streets into avenues of quick money for shirt-sleeved men peddling anything from MacArthur biographies, selling at three dollars, to cokes, selling at a nickel.

The red brick, 85-year-old courthouse squatting in the typical city square is bedecked in Confederate flags, proudly unfurled. On its top flies one of the few U. S. flags in evidence throughout the town.

SO MANY YANKEES

Sitting placidly in front of the administration building, a whiskered old gentleman looked disgustedly at the noisy city Sunday afternoon and commented, "I've never seen so damn many Yankees in my life."

Throughout the day, old flippers and shiny new autos streamed through the town bumper to bumper, noting its gay holiday appearance.

One city official estimated the town has grown to 35,000 already. By Monday, the experts are guessing there will be over 100,000 people on hand to witness Mrs. MacArthur's arrival. "It's out of hand already," a member of one of the dozen welcome committees remarked.

Friends of the general's wife have been arriving hourly, deluging the Faircloth home with phone calls. School friends and acquaintances, none of whom has seen the prominent lady for 14 years, are traveling from miles around just to pay their respects.

PATRIOTIC FAMILY

Those who were, and have remained by communicative means, close friends of Mrs. MacArthur will tell you that the lady who will be honored grew up in a home where patriotism was virtually a religion, and in a family rich in Confederate tradition. They say, therefore, that her marriage in 1938 to Douglas MacArthur, a retired chief of staff of the U. S. Army and at the time grand marshal of the Philippines, came as little surprise—even though he was 19 years her senior and General MacArthur's father and Mrs. MacArthur's maternal grandfather fought against each other at Murrefreesboro in one of the bitterest battles of the War Between the States.

Her return Monday marks the couple's 14th wedding anniversary. They were married in New York on April 30, 1937, and began their honeymoon in the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, later the scene of the MacArthur's New York return. The townspeople are anxious to see this woman again, to see what changes from being engulfed in the Pacific war might have brought to her, and to meet the son who, until 10 days ago, had never set foot on continental U. S. soil.

ARRIVAL AT 11 A. M.

But at best, their look will be a short one. The MacArthurs are scheduled to arrive at nearby Stewart Air Base Monday morning at 11 a. m. For the next five hours, they will parade into town, stop at the World War II monument on the outskirts, receive flowers from several delegations and be entertained at a luncheon in the fashionable Stone River Country Club.

To serve as toastmaster for the club luncheon, Henry Alexander, an old friend of the MacArthur's and now president of Morgan and Company stock brokers in New York, will fly into Nashville and drive the remaining 32 miles to Murrefreesboro.

There are many people in Murrefreesboro Sunday night who have come just to take a look at the man who defied the President and lost his job because of his defiance. But the people who are planning and working to make this celebration Monday a success are friends who simply want to welcome a friend back home.

Forces, and Adm. Forest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations. While week-end comment from the President Truman-MacArthur issue, the White House remained silent on a proposal by Harold E. Stassen Saturday that the President call in Gen. MacArthur for a "reconciliation."

CALLED FOR TRUCE

The former Republican candidate for President, who is now President of the University of Pennsylvania, delivered a letter to the executive office Saturday calling for a truce. He stated that "the issue of peace and war must be above personalities of partisanship if America is to exercise constructive leadership among the free nations."

Meanwhile, Sen. Taft, Republican, Ohio, who has been a staunch supporter of Gen. MacArthur's position, said his resolution calling for "no appeasement" of Communist China would not be pressed until after the hearing is over.

Taft said in a Senate address last week that he feared Secretary of State Acheson might make a compromising move in the Communist direction in order to settle the Korean war. He suggested giving up Formosa, a nationalist China stronghold, or admitting Communist to the United Nations as possible "appeasement" moves.

BRING IN FDR

In a broadcast, Sen. Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, declared that if President Franklin D. Roosevelt and former Secretary of State Cordell Hull were right about Far Eastern policy, President Truman and Secretary Acheson must be wrong.

"Roosevelt and Hull were so strongly convinced that the safety of this country depended on a friendly China that they risked war in the Pacific and brought about Pearl Harbor," said Bridges.

AIR SALUTE TO DEFENSE DAY—A highlight of the gigantic Defense Day parade here Monday will come at 3:55 p. m. when the 20th Air Wing from Shaw Field, S. C., will fly 12 F-84 Thunderjets at low altitude from the Terminal Station, up Mitchell Street, S. W., to the City Hall. The Navy will also stage an air show at the parade's beginning when Corsairs and Martin Attack planes from the Atlanta Naval Air Station fly down Peachtree Street, beginning at 3 p. m.

"I thought they were right at the time, I think they are right today."

Four other senators, two Democrats and two Republicans, agreed that the issue should be debated without reference to personalities. Sen. Brewster, Republican, Maine, said in a radio panel discussion that "all of us are trying to seek peace," and he thought the debate on policy should "get on with a minimum of personalities and partisanship."

Sen. McMahon, on the same program, said that while he opposed Gen. MacArthur's policy, he favored "a divorce" from personalities in discussing the controversy.

Sen. Saltonstall, Republican, Massachusetts, said the debate should be "objective" and based "on the facts." Sen. Sparkman, Democrat, Alabama, said there had been greater need "to be absolutely objective, and to disregard personalities and emotions." While he called for disclosure of as much information as could be made available on the issue, Sen. Russell still adhered Sunday to his view that the forthcoming hearings should be behind closed

Secretary Snyder, Governor Talmadge and Mayor Hartsfield will ride in a car immediately behind an honorary escort of 19 Korean War veterans, 14 of whom are recovering from wounds suffered in action.

'Quick and Dead' Records Dramatic, Documentary

By HOWELL JONES

When "The Quick and the Dead," a dramatic document on the atom and hydrogen bombs was broadcast as four weekly half-hour programs last Summer, it created a nationwide stir.

So great was the reaction, that RCA-Victor decided to record it. It will be released soon on records of all three speeds—45, 33½ and conventional 78, making the dramatization available to the public in permanent form.

With world events revolving around the two super bombs, "The Quick and the Dead" merits a hearing, and rehearsing, in every American home, and certainly should find use in schools and universities.

The record features Bob Hope in the role of the American taxpayer, eager to learn about nuclear fission. His questions, and they are many, are answered by William L. Laurence, New York Times science reporter.

Other participants include Helen Hayes in the role of a German woman scientist, and Paul Lukas, as Dr. Albert Einstein. The voices of President Truman, General Eisenhower, Winston Churchill, the late President Roosevelt and Adolf Hitler are included in the recording.

Don Giovanni

With Atlantics and other Georgians still talking about the recent visit of the Met, music lovers in the state will be glad to know that "Don Giovanni," regarded by many—including the late George Bernard Shaw—as the greatest of all operas, has been recorded in its entirety by the Haydn Society. This work is on four Long Play records. It is the first time "Don Giovanni" has been recorded on LP.

The Haydn Society spent months in research and in securing Europe for the best singers for the roles in Mozart's masterpiece. Its efforts were not wasted. Mariano Stabile of La Scala sings the lecherous Don. Alois Farnesioff and Hilda Konecni, both of the Vienna State Opera, sing Leporello and

Rosenkavalier Great

Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," is among operatic repertoire that bears hearing time and time again, as much for its sparkling and champagne-like music as for its witty and nostalgic libretto. But with or without the plot, "The Cavalier of the Rose" stands apart as music that embodies all the lyrical genius of the composer.

Antal Dorati proves this point as he directs the Robin Hood Dell Orchestra of Philadelphia in a suite which he himself arranged from the opera score for his first work on RCA-Victor's Red Seal records (WDM 1478) recently released. He gives a beautiful performance.

Korean Losses

Irk British, Strachey Told

New York Times News Service Special to The Atlanta Constitution

LONDON, April 29—Shouts of "Warmonger" and "Send Our Boys Home From Korea" greeted War Minister John Strachey Sunday when he addressed his constituents at Dundee.

Expressing regret at the heavy casualties suffered by British units in the new Chinese offensive, Strachey expressed hope that the struggle in Korea would be settled by negotiation if the Chinese were defeated in this new attack or that eventually the fighting would "die away."

The War Minister expressed the opinion that the same division of opinion over Gen. Douglas MacArthur's proposals for ending the war existed in Britain as in the United States. But he said that British and American policy was to prevent the conflict from spreading.

Herbert Morrison, the Foreign Secretary, he said, was conducting a determined, "desperate" effort to prevent a widening of the struggle, "not by appeasement but by an iron restraint combined with a most determined effort to improve our own preparedness for defense."

Prolonged Korean Conflict Kindles Soviet Propaganda

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—The State Department said Sunday Soviet propaganda is "riding high" in Germany, aided by prolongation of the Korean fighting.

One Communist story spread in Germany, the Department advised, has Gen. MacArthur thus addressing his troops outside Seoul: "Men! Before you lies a rich city with plenty of wine and good food. Capture it and all the girls and riches in the city belong to you."

"To stories of American brutality in Korea," the Department said, "are added items about the misdeeds of Americans in Germany and the Germans are assured that, as more American troops arrive they will be subjected to outrages of every kind."

The outline of Communist methods was given in a 108-page pamphlet, illustrated with maps, cartoons and photographs to document the struggle between East and West.

After reporting that at the moment Soviet propaganda is riding high, the Department advised that "only an increase of power in the free world as a whole, and a growing unity among the free peoples will be likely to change the picture in our favor."

"Outside the native Communist organization, there are many thousands of agents in West Germany who have been sent in by the Soviet and East German authorities," it continued.

"These agents are independent of the local Communists and may even be unknown to them. They are the spearhead of the drive. They are far less interested in making converts than in making bad feeling between German classes, between West Germany and the Allies, and among French, British and Americans."

I Don't Want To Sue Met, Says Merrill

HOLLYWOOD, April 29—(AP)—"I have a very good case of suing the Metropolitan Opera if I wanted to," ousted baritone Robert Merrill declared Sunday, "but I don't want to."

Commenting on his dismissal three weeks ago by the Met's director, Rudolf Bing, Merrill said Bing's refusal Saturday to submit the dispute to arbitration "shows that I am legally right."

Bing fired the leading baritone on charges of contract violation. He said Merrill failed to show up for an afternoon performance and that the singer ran off to make a motion picture after contracting to appear in the Met's current road tour.

Bing asked the American Guild of Musical Artists to take disciplinary action against Merrill. When the Guild decided that the issue was one for arbitration, Bing disagreed.

"... An artist who behaved as selfishly and as disloyally as Mr. Merrill has no place in the Metropolitan," said Bing. "The case is closed as far as I am concerned."

To which Merrill replied Sunday:

"Mr. Bing is the boss and he's entitled to do whatever he wants. I'm not bitter against him. I've got along with worse types before, and I'm sure this will end amicably. But I just hope this is for the good of the Metropolitan."

Merrill told a reporter his position is that Bing had no legal option on him. He said he tried to reach a peaceful agreement with the Met on his request for leave of absence to make a film for Paramount, and added:

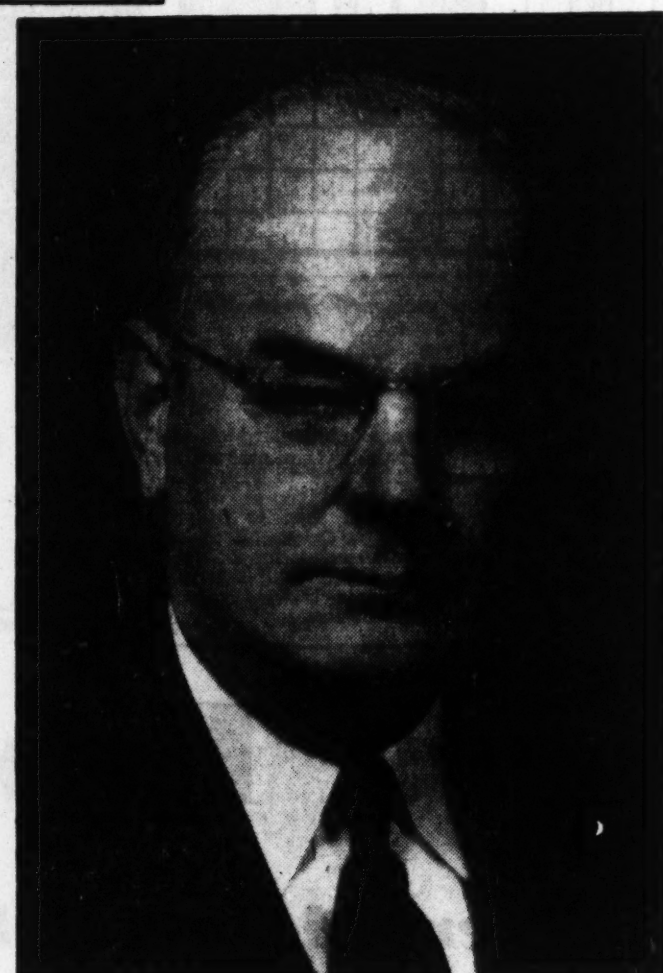

"I'm sorry it had to happen this way."

Elks Hold Session

Georgia State Association, Elks of the World, claims success for its session on April 22, 23, 24. Highlighting the occasion was a street parade on Sunday. The parade started at the David T. Howard High School and terminated at Haysay Temple C. M. E. Church, where the main address was delivered by Judge W. C. Hueston, Grand secretary of Education and Grand Commissioner. Highlight for Tuesday's session was the state oratorical contest at Ebenezer Baptist Church. Miss Dolores Richard, of Beach High School, Savannah, won first place on the subject, "The Negro and the Constitution." Second place was won by Miss Mabel Mitchell of Booker T. Washington High School, Atlanta, with "The Constitution and Slavery." Miss Richards will compete in the regional contest which includes Georgia, Florida, North Carolina and South Carolina. The regional contest offers a $1,000 scholarship to the winner. The grand ball at the Elks Home also took a spotlight. The Elks formed a motorcade to visit the grave of the late Jesse Hanley, who was once state president. The Daughters of Elks held ses-

Business Education

The Atlanta Business and Trade Association announces its co-operation with the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the City Education Board and the Fulton County public schools in observing "Business Education Day," on Wednesday. Public school teachers, white and colored, have been assigned to inspect various business enterprises to get first-hand information of how business is conducted so they can be more helpful in teaching students. Several business establishments have agreed to put their business operation at the disposal of the teachers.

According to the arrangement made by the Boards of Education, teachers will be assigned to places of business on the same schedule as their daily class-room hour and the school will be closed Wednesday. The colored business enterprises will climax their day's observation in a general program at 2 p. m. Wednesday at Bethlehem Church on W. Hunter St. There the teachers and business people can exchange views. Classes in business administration from each of the colleges, high schools and business colleges are also invited. The Atlanta Life Insurance Company will exhibit Progress Films.

District Meeting

The Fifth District of the Georgia Missionary Baptist and Educational Convention held an annual joint meeting of workers, at Zion Grove Baptist Church on Stonewall Street last Monday. J. H. Lockett, pastor, made the welcome address; Mrs. B. J. Johnson led the devotional service. The meeting was presided over by the president of the district, Rev. D. T. George. The theme for the session was "Financing Georgia Baptist Junior College." The District consists of 20 churches and each church made a report of their quota. Rev. C. H. Pickens preached on "Opportunity on the Other Side." Mrs. C. M. Pearson, heading the women's department, brought a message from that organization. Dr. William Holmes Borders, state president, outlined a State program and advocated a five-year plan for the

Art Exhibition

The Metropolitan Museum of Art will make a three-month loan of paintings and sculpture to Atlanta University, Museum spokesmen announced Wednesday in New York City. Works depict the life of man, as seen in various countries from the tenth century, B. C., to the present.

The loan exhibition, which includes 34 paintings and nine sculptures, will go first to Fisk University, Nashville; then to Atlanta University, and then to Dillard University, New Orleans. Each institution will show it for a three-month period. The exhibition will open at Atlanta University here some time in July.

Candidates for the six 1952 fellowships are required to have not less than five years of experience in daily newspaper or press association editorial work and to plan on making journalism a life career. A choice of four areas of study is offered—Europe, South and Central America, the Far East and the Near East. Applications will be received until Oct. 1. Application blanks may be obtained by addressing Wilbur Forrest, chairman of the fellowship committee, New York Herald-Tribune, 230 West Forty-first St., New York City.

New Group Studies Plans For Annual State Pageant

By CHARLES SKINNER

If a $60,000 problem can be ironed out, summer of 1952 in all likelihood will see first presentation of a prospective annual pageant giving in full costumed brilliance the story of "Builders of Georgia."

3 Georgians Die in Korea

Twelve new Georgia casualties in Korea, including three fatalities, were announced Sunday by the Defense Department.

Lt. James F. Exley, of Columbus, was reported killed in action. Pvt. Bobby J. Halstead, of Columbus, and Cpl. Durwood F. Alexander, USMC, of Rt. 2, Carrollton, were listed dead of wounds.

Pfc. Oliver Palmer, of Brookhaven, was listed as injured and the following Georgians wounded: Cpl. Elbert Easley, of Dalton; Sgt. William T. Flowers, Cpl. Ernest Fuller, Sgt. James H. Goodwin and Pvt. Abraham R. Harris, all of Columbus; Sgt. Clinton Holliday, of Union Point; Cpl. James R. Ivester, of Gainesville; and Pvt. Harvey C. Neisler, of 1991 Reynolds Dr., Atlanta.

Vidalia Women's Home Shows New Annex

Constitution State News Service VIDALIA, April 29—The recently completed and furnished infirmary annex at Bethany Home for Aged Women at Vidalia held open house Sunday.

The new building furnished the home a needed addition to their hospital building which has been in use for several years as a main part of the program of service to aged women.

The Bethany Home at Vidalia and the newly acquired home for aged men at Millen are sponsored by the Primitive Baptist Church. C. T. Sims is manager.

Driving force behind the idea of a grand-scale State pageant, to be staged in Atlanta, and perhaps lesser pageants over the State, is the comparatively young Georgia Educational Exchange, composed of some of Georgia's leading educators and history-minded leaders and headed by Dr. Guy Wells, president of GSCW.

A brand-new body, the Georgia Historical Commission, chartered by the past Legislature, has announced it can be counted on to lend support.

PLANS FOR PAGEANT

Heading a GEE committee which already has sketched basic plans, is professional pageant master Edith Russell, of Atlanta. Miss Russell has presented some 60 major pageants and, with Don Elias, owner-publisher of the Asheville (N. C.) Citizen-Times, conceived the idea of the Cherokee (N. C.) pageant which made its highly successful debut last summer.

From Oglethorpe down to the builders of this decade, the pageant would chronicle Georgia's progress from a colony founded by British prisoners to one of the nation's most promising states.

Actually, plans for the pageant are stalemated until financing is assured, the GEE says.

FUNDS PROPOSAL

Considered most practical is the plan used to underwrite the Cherokee production, in which the State appropriated part of the money, the remainder subscribed, and the entire sum eventually to be paid back out of admission receipts.

On whatever scale the pageant is finally worked out, if the

Cleft Palate Clinic Here Only One in the South

By KATHERINE BARNWELL

Atlanta has a new cleft palate clinic—the only one of its kind in the South.

Established by the Atlanta Junior League with the help of prominent Atlanta specialists several months ago, the clinic serves both adults and children with defects of the mouth or jaws.

The next clinic is scheduled for 4 p. m. Thursday at the Junior League Speech School, 1430 West Peachtree St. N. W.

Miss Mary Rose Costello, director of the Speech School, pointed out that cleft palate is "one of the most frequent of all crippling conditions—causing disfigurement in appearance and difficulty in speaking."

CO-ORDINATION She said the clinic marked the co-ordination of many medical services necessary for the rehabilitation of cleft palate cases. Specialists in otology, pediatrics, speech pathology, plastic surgery, dentistry, orthodontia, prosthodontia and psychology are giving their time for examinations and diagnosis.

Miss Costello said after diagnosis the recommended treatment was "followed closely so that the patient's needs (medical, dental psychological and speech) may be completely met."

A. P. Jarrell, of the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, and Mrs. Mary Collier, of the Crippled Children's Division, State Department of Public Welfare, work in close co-operation with the clinic. Charges are based on the patient's ability to pay.

STATISTICS Miss Costello said statistics showed at least one out of every 1,000 babies is born with a cleft

H-Plant Guards Patrol Where Farms Once Were

By PAT LIVINGSTON

Armed guards are patrolling high, barbed fences going up in Horse Creek Valley and farmers who used to wrest a living from the worn-out, over-worked soil "don't live there any more."

These vacated houses, now used for field offices and fire departments in the "H-Bomb Plant Site," caught the eyes of Emory University political science students driving through the Savannah River project during the weekend.

Purposes of the field trip were to observe the impact the Atomic Energy Commission's selection has made on the people who have moved out and those who are still living on the 2,000 acres of the site, plus the effect the project is having on the two-State section surrounding it.

Lunch with Augusta Merchants' Association followed a tour of the Knox Brothers Company in Thomson. Association President Ernest F. Bentley told the students that Augusta's growing pains were Arthur L. Tackman, assistant to the manager, Atomic Energy Commission, Savannah River Project, briefed the students on the site.

A new four-lane highway, continuation of U. S. 1, ribbons through North Augusta, skirting three small textile towns. A straightway four-lane strip is under construction on the right, direct to the site. Close to Alkan, S. C., the roadside bristles with new homes, motor courts and trailer parks.

Farmers owning land between Aiken and the site are hustling to divide their acreage into lots for low-cost housing. Already, trailer parks on this side are filled. New bathhouses and powerlines herald others under construction.

OLD-TIME STORE

At Ellenton, biggest town within the area, Mike Cassels sits on a bench in front of his general store. He is still doing a big business in the unpretentious building and loath to leave his home.

One amazed student noted a stack of wheelbarrows dozens high in a vast equipment yard in Ellenton. A batch plant, mixing concrete automatically, excited others.

Interviewing Jimmie Jackson, service station operator in Allendale, S. C., a student heard him say he was going to build a cafe next door and that the advent of the plant had revived a lot of sick businesses in Allendale.

A drycleaner, who previously couldn't get a buyer for his concern, now won't sell at any price.

Traveling on to Louisville, the students were given an officious welcome by the chief of police.

Citizens vied for the opportunity of having a student guest for the night. The Kiwanis and Exchange clubs were hosts at a banquet. Roy Harris, Augusta, told the students, club members, and Louisville News and Farmer publisher, Mrs. Virginia Price, that he foresees a campaign program of increased appropriation for the Minimum Foundation. Harris deplored the crowding of town schools and utter desertion of rural schools.

J. W. Burgess, Louisville Exchange Club president, and Gene Eubank, president, Kiwanis Club, urged the students to "look the town over" and give their recommendations for an increased tourist business.

VISITS TO FARMS

Wheat, rye and oats high in the fields, pastures deep in crimson clover, pecan orchards in leaf, and sturdy beef cattle on the hoof made the students long for country living when Eubank, also county agent, took the group to several Jefferson County farms.

Students on the trip were Ed Murrah, Columbus; Ed Halpern, New York City; Bob Offutt, Atlanta; Cameron Magnon, Tampa, Fla.; Ed Asbury, Elberton; Ben Tarbutton, Sandersville; Sam Breiman, Perth Amboy, N. J.; Whiteley Walden, Louisville; Paul Currie, Atlanta; Frank Pidcock, Moultrie; Al Weston, Savannah; Harry Tausch, Gastonia, N. C.; David Anderson, graduate student, Mulberry, Fla.

Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell and Dr. Ralph Purcell of the Political Science Department brought a guest, Dr. Edward S. Corwin, visiting professor from Princeton.

Some farmers put geese in their strawberry beds. They keep the grass down and do not eat strawberry foliage.

Hearts Become New In Real Conversion

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

This church news reporter is an ardent believer in heartfelt religion, and also just as ardently a believer in heartfelt sin. The two convictions are based on personal experience, observation and direct teachings of the Bible that God wrote and inspired.

Not all church members in Georgia enjoy heartfelt religion, while 82 per cent of the people say they are unaware of any unrighteousness in their lives, yet it is estimated that only one person in 16 has any definite realization of the reality and deadliness of sin. David, St. Paul and the prodigal son give illustrations of heart-felt sin. These three men give indisputable examples of heartfelt religion. David was lifted up from the pit of misery and established on sure ground; Paul was delivered from the body of death and given victory; the prodigal son was transferred from his pigsty to the house of his father.

That looks like personal experience to me, in personal forgiveness and complete restoration. In real conversion one's heart is made anew, and the Holy Spirit comes in bringing love, joy, peace and the consciousness of God as Father, indwelling. A person cannot have the Father and Son in heart without a conscious knowledge of it. Of course, where there is no awareness of sin, there can be no awareness of forgiveness. The prodigal son "came to himself," and said, "I have sinned." The parable closes with his penitent return and confession, and the father's loving welcome and forgiveness.

People Disappointed

Georgia has about 1,600,000 church members. A large percentage of these people find disappointment in their religious experience. They admit failure to realize the experience all preachers assure them on confession of Christ. Preachers give assurance of happiness through true religion; but they paint only half the picture, when they fail to set forth the fundamental steps to be taken before one comes to know true religion. The 6 per cent of average church members who testify to an inner spiritual experience know something of true religion, while others realize they do not overcome the world's temptations, do not have the thrill of religious love, peace, hope and complete assurance of the Spirit's witness.

They go along with the church, realizing they know very little of what it is all about. Men do not legally draw on banks where they have nothing on deposit. Christian believers can draw on the bank of heaven only when they have set up an account and made a full deposit of their treasures and lives.

The fact that religion has been cheapened and religious standards lowered underlies the secret of such widespread disappointment. When a notorious gambler said he was just as religious as a preacher, and when an actress sang a church solo only to be brought up for drunkenness a day later said her religious life and her social life were entirely separate matters, they gave expression to the lowered conceptions of what true religion is.

So new church members may be gained and "converts" may be numbered, whirlwind campaigns are promoted, asking people to say yes to Christ and sign a card, or hold up their hands when nobody is looking.

There is not a devil in hell, nor a Communist on this earth, but who says yes to Jesus Christ. The devils know, but they do not yield. What I want to know is: How can Communists deny and fight a Christ and work like devils to destroy His kingdom when they declare neither the Christ nor His kingdom are realities?

Christ said something about a

4,600 Acres In Illinois Are Flooded

MUSCATINE, Iowa, April 29.—(AP)—Waves whipped by a 30-mile-an-hour wind slammed a gaping hole in a Mississippi River levee Sunday, flooding 4,600 acres of Illinois farm land.

The levee broke about 3 a. m. (EST), two miles upstream from Muscatine.

Nineteen farms on the Illinois side of the swollen river were affected. Most of the residents had already moved out, however, anticipating the break.

The flood water gushed across Illinois State Highway 93 about a mile east of Muscatine. It washed three breaks in the highway, ranging from 30 to 100 feet long.

This severed the last direct traffic route between Muscatine and the quad-cities—Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, Ill., and Davenport, Iowa, some 25 miles east.

More than a week ago high water closed the other direct route, U. S. Highway 61.

Two men patrolling the levee discovered the break, Harry Harder, Muscatine mailman, and his partner, Lee Freise, said the first break was about 50 yards wide.

"In a matter of moments," they said, "the hole widened to 300 yards."

It was almost the same spot where the levee broke once before, in 1920.

In Muscatine, the break caused a quick drop in the river level and eased pressure on the South Muscatine dike.

Evangelism Is Declared Primary Task of Church

"Why do churches spend so much time with revivals?" This question was asked recently by a listener on "The Pastor's Study," a radio program of the Atlanta Christian Council. This sermon, which answers it, is one of a series which will appear in the Monday Morning Pulpit, each of which will reply to a similar actual question.

"The Pastor's Study," where a minister talks with listeners about their questions, can be heard every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at 11:30 p. m., over radio station WSB.

By CHARLES BOLEYN,
Pastor, Bethany Methodist Church

Jesus commanded his disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Evangelism is the primary task of the church. But the meanings of the term evangelism, and the presuppositions which are brought to the evangelistic task vary widely. I would like to suggest briefly the kind of evangelism I think we need.

First of all, we need an evangelism which orients itself to the divine initiative. We must remember, "We love Him because He first loved us." God is God, and we must not seek to wrest the initiative from Him. We do not control God's power; only God does that.

Our evangelism is in response to the approach of God who has come nigh us in Jesus Christ. It is the task of humble witnesses who seek to be the instruments through which God's Spirit may express Himself in creative and redemptive power. Therefore, all evangelism begins with a "tarrying."

The kind of evangelism we need is a program which arises from the bottom, and not one which is imposed from the top. Plans can be made, programs can be organized; helpful programs and far-sighted plans, but unless there arises willingly and gladly an impetus on the part of the local congregation to make this task its own, then the efforts will be fruitless.

The kind of evangelism we need is one which is theologically adequate. This is not to say that our faith is bound up with or wholly dependent upon a particular theology; I do not believe so. But, it is to say that some interpretations of our faith are more relevant to the world in which we live than others.

An evangelism which is in no way related to the live issues of the day; which seeks to overlook the challenge of powerful cultural and social influences; which tries to give easy and glib answers to sincere questionings of the human spirit; which seeks to bottle up the ever new wine of the creative working of God in the old wine skins of tradition and vested interest will not be much help to people who do respond.

We need an evangelism which will rally people around the church. We have had entirely too much evangelism which issued only in increased individualism.

If God's church is to be His instrument of redemption, it must be near the center of our lives. To become a Christian ought to mean that a person takes his place in that fellowship of faith and service which is the church. Evangelism should lead us to become men and women who are loyal to the church, of which Jesus Christ is the head.

The evangelism we need is one which issues in an ethical concern. I do not mean simply which issues in a concern to be kind to others, or to contribute occasionally to charities. I mean a concern for society which is akin to the compassion of Christ; a concern which is interested in justice; which says with Amos, "Let judgment run down as mighty waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream."

It's a great task to which we are called!

Never in the history of the world has the evangelistic task been so imperative. The urgency of our world situation calls for the best the church can give. And in it all we have His promise, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

John Wesley was under this feeling of compulsion when he described his calling as being the attempt to get men to increasingly "put Christ at the center of their fellowships."

*Every dollar cut from non-military spending is a dollar available for defense
—and a check on Inflation*

Five more things that must be done to check Inflation:

1. Increase production: To meet military needs, provide civilian necessities, help keep prices down.
 2. Support taxes needed to put our Government on a "pay-as-you-go" basis.
 3. Accept controls: To assure military materials and to keep prices down by reducing competition for these materials.
 4. Increase savings: To provide investment money for greater production, lessen the demand for goods, and to build a personal reserve for our own future needs.
 5. Buy only for real needs: We must prevent bidding against each other for scarce goods.
- None of these things will be easy for any of us to do. But everybody will agree that it's worth sacrificing to prevent the Sixth Column Enemy—INFLATION—from bleeding our economy.

* * * *

This message is one of a series on Inflation. It is brought to you by the life insurance companies and their agents in the interest of keeping America strong and protecting the purchasing power of the dollars of their 83 million policyholders.

You can help check Inflation by doing your part and by letting your representatives in Government know that you support every action they take to check Inflation—the Sixth Column Enemy.

Do Fences Make Good Neighbors?

Editor L. P. Cross, of The Clayton Tribune, is still stirred up about the milk situation in his community up on the North Carolina border. You will remember that about two weeks ago the Georgia Department of Agriculture stopped a North Carolina dairy from delivering milk in Clayton and Rabun County.

What Mr. Cross has to say is this: "When the Georgia authorities say that the creameries of North Carolina cannot continue to supply their customers whom they have supplied with milk for a quarter of a century it's nonsense. If there was anything wrong with the milk products that they furnish it would make a difference, but the Nantahala Creamery has been accredited with being the best in North Carolina and the fourth best in the United States.

"The claim that Georgia cannot accept the North Carolina standards is too much of a 'holier than thou' attitude that makes Georgia look small, by North Carolinians and Georgians alike."

The Rabun County editor points out that for 150 years folks have lived along the state line without a ripple in their friendship. They have attended the same churches and schools. Farmers whose land lies "astraddle" the line cultivate the fields with no thought to the border. Georgia children go to a North Carolina school close to them and so do children from North Carolina go to school in Georgia through reciprocal arrangements.

Then for someone to come along and say folks along the border can't drink the same milk has been hard for the Rabun Countians to take.

We have a great deal of sympathy with Mr. Cross' position. State lines were never meant to be barriers as the borders between European countries always have been. Goods should flow freely between states with the minimum of regulation.

As for foods, including milk, we have a Federal Pure Foods and Drug Act which should furnish adequate protection.

We can go along with Tom Linder in his desire to foster dairying in Georgia and to protect Georgia children from impure milk. But this cutting off what seems to be a good supply to a comparatively isolated mountain county is carrying this protection business a little far. Also too many of Mr. Linder's decisions seem more vindictive than sound. And some, if he will pardon us, make no sense at all. They get all mixed with Mr. Linder's Biblical prophecies. Furthermore, there is no doubt whatever but that Mr. Linder is delaying the development of Georgia as a real dairy state by his personal, dictatorial spites.

Florida intimates a retaliatory threat, the Florida Legislature having passed a resolution for a committee to confer with Georgians on "trade barrier differences." One Florida legislator has said, "Georgia wants to ship us poultry but denies this state the right to sell milk in Georgia."

Tom Linder says that Georgia is getting all of Florida's good milk now. Suppose the Florida commissioner of agriculture says the same thing about Hall County, Georgia, chickens and sets up a chicken blockade at the state line.

Good sense calls for officials from the states concerned to get together and work out interstate standards on milk and other commodities of daily use.

Until Georgia can produce enough milk within its borders to meet the demands of its population, we've no business being quite so choosy about shipments from outside.

Achievement—And Doubt—in Korea

With the battle still raging in Korea, and the ultimate outcome yet in grave doubt, it still may be seen that General Ridgway achieved a really magnificent military success in recovering from the initial breakthrough by the Chinese.

The breakthrough, which occurred when a battalion of South Koreans abandoned their positions, could have been disastrous. The ill effects of it are apparent in the current retreat, which is to protect flanks exposed by the dent made in the center.

There is no blinking the fact that another breakthrough seriously would damage the UN force and imperil the entire operation. It might then be necessary to abandon Korea and remove the forces to Japan.

Should that occur—or before it occurs, should the worst happen in the wake of another breakthrough, there would almost assuredly be a bombing of North China and, should the Russians react as they may, of Russian bases themselves.

The test in Korea is between a highly mechanized and equipped Western army, and a huge mass of Orientals and Asiatics equipped with minor arms, depending on sheer weight of manpower. That Russia is so experimenting, because of her own situation, goes without saying.

There must be a very real salute to General Ridgway for a very great accomplishment in tactics, and we can hope the Chinese will be so chewed up they will be willing to make a peace.

Newspaperman of the Year—Every Year

Understandably gratifying to those of us who work with him is Sigma Delta Chi's recognition of Ralph McGill as the South's outstanding newspaperman of the year.

Of course, it is the constant contention of his colleagues on what we modestly call "The South's Standard Newspaper" that Ralph McGill is the nation's outstanding newspaperman every year. But then, admittedly, we may well possess a possible slight prejudice in the matter.

At any rate, in picking this particular time at which to concur, Sigma Delta Chi has demonstrated a judgment on what it is to be congratulated. For while, man and boy, Ralph McGill has been producing magnificent reading much longer than he cares to admit, it is the past year—in the front page spot he so long deserved—that his genius reached the full fruition of its greatness.

Moreover, as an unreconstructed police reporter at heart, he never better exemplified the McGill faculty for being around when big stories break than by his presence in Washington when the assassination try was made at Blair House, in New York when MacArthur returned, and in an Ohio coffee shop when John L. Lewis dropped in for eggs overlight and the interview which the local papers had been told would not be forthcoming.

This was the year that his book, "Israel Revisited," was published and another, "The Chattahoochee," begun. It was also the year he continued to find time—from where not even his closest associates know—to write numerous pieces for leading national magazines including the Saturday Evening Post, in which the latest of his articles is scheduled for next week. And finally it was the year when—in the best Grady tradition—he spoke on an average of twice a week in every part of the world, telling the New South's story from Boston to Beersheba.

As we say, we may be prejudiced. But those of us who know the man McGill best take issue with his selection as "the South's outstanding newspaperman of the year" only with regard to the limitations of time and space.—J. T.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

Wishful Thinkers

The Editors: President Truman and his followers are hoping the Chinese Reds will lose so many men that they will mercifully grant us peace.

If they do we will have gained nothing. The peace treaty will be worthless. Stalin, Lenin and every good Communist have looked forward to world domination as a goal. The only thing that keeps us out of a global war now is that Russia is not ready.

Everything MacArthur said in his address to Congress is the truth. We could stop the war in Korea if we would bomb the Manchurian sanctuary, blockade China, and turn Chiang's forces loose and let them regain their homeland. Men who advocate our present course of action are wishful thinkers and do not know how to deal with Reds. W. B. GARNER, Warthen.

The $27 Question

The Editors: Celestine Sibley's article "One Who Lives on $27.83" per month is very interesting. It was really "fact, not fun," wasn't it? It tempted me to write. That's something I've never done before.

I am a woman 68 years of age, have been practically an invalid for more years than I like to remember. I have nearly all my life been a property owner and paid quite a bit of taxes but in recent years I lost everything. Now I receive $27 per month old-age pension. Would some bright person please tell me how I can pay $1 monthly house rent, $2.25 for water,

$1.50 to $2.50 light bill, and eat three times a day?

There is no money for medical aid; there is no charity hospital in the country; no money for much-needed clothes, shoes, bed linen, etc. I tried to carry a burial insurance. It cost $2 per month. I had to drop it. Coal has been expensive, sometimes I didn't have any coffee.

I couldn't pay for it because everything is very high and now we have to pay the "sales tax" and I cannot see how we old people can live. There is much talk of raising teachers' salaries and most people have had a salary raise and they needed it to live, but I don't hear anything about the aged being remembered. I trust our governor has not forgotten us. May the good Lord help us.

No Time to Rest

The Editors: For some time the Living Words feature has been omitted from our paper and I must say that it has been missed.

I am enclosing two quotations that I would like for you to consider for Living Words if you see fit to reactivate this feature. I think these are very timely at present in light of the "Truman-MacArthur" news.

"Human beings find it difficult to base their opinions upon evidence rather than upon their hopes"—Bert Russell.

Overemphasis Knows No Iron Curtain

A Moscow newspaper has severely criticized the growing tendency of Russian students to neglect their studies and overemphasize athletics.

Maybe the gulf between the USA and the USSR isn't as great as previously has been thought.

The paper's condemnation of the overemphasis of sports follows by a couple of weeks revelation that several Russian athletes have been taking bribes to throw soccer games.

Who said "never the twain shall meet"?

I wouldn't be at all surprised to hear at any time now that Russian colleges had passed a sanity code limiting the number of rubles monthly which amateur athletes may be paid.

Who knows... the moguls of communized baseball may even get together and throw out their commissar.

Of course, there is one phase of our sports activity which the Russians are hardly likely to emulate. There won't be any booing when Joe Stalin throws out the first ball.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

National Security Or Plain Politics

WASHINGTON—Sen. Robert A. Taft and other Republican critics of the administration's Far Eastern policy are making a determined fight to have open hearings on the controversy raised by the President's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

On the other hand, Chairman Richard B. Russell and his Democratic associates on the Senate armed services committee, which will be in charge of the inquiry, are determined that the hearings be conducted in closed session. The only exception Senator Russell makes is in the case of General MacArthur, who is scheduled to be the first witness. If the general desires that his testimony be taken in open hearings, he will be accorded this privilege. Otherwise it is the purpose of the chairman to conduct everything behind closed doors.

The purpose behind the Russell move is national security. If there is any purpose back of the Taft maneuver, it may be set down as political.

In explanation of his stand against conducting open hearings, Senator Russell has reminded that we are engaged in a bitter war with the Chinese Communists in Korea. Much of the questioning regarding the facts leading up to the MacArthur dismissal will touch on matters of military secrecy. The committee chairman has pointed out that "one unguarded statement" made in an open hearing might endanger "the lives of several thousand of our boys in Korea."

Herein lies the crux of the matter, of course. It should be plain to anyone the risks involved in holding a full dress open hearing on the MacArthur controversy. Such hearings would equal or surpass the recent crime hearings of the Kefauver committee as a radio and television attraction. Regardless of how circumspect the participants in the inquiry attempted to be, the zeal of the headline hunters on the committee would lead to mischief. It might result in grave injury to our fighting forces in Korea by tipping off the enemy on what our strategy is.

To see that the public is kept fully informed on matters not involving military secrecy, Chairman Russell has proposed a sensible course for releasing parts of the testimony after each hearing. He would make the transcript available after it has been deleted of any military secrets.

Senator Taft finds that unacceptable and he is preparing to demand a showdown on the question when the armed services group and the Senate foreign relations committee, which will sit jointly in the hearings, meet to outline procedure.

Sen. Homer Ferguson (Rep., Mich.) would go even further. He is demanding that a joint congressional group, made up of members of both houses, be authorized to conduct a full-scale investigation into the MacArthur incident. He would put on the same kind of show the Republicans did when they launched the Pearl Harbor investigating committee after the end of the war. Having served on that committee, he has the dress-parade complex with respect to investigating bodies.

What Senator Taft and his associates are out for is obvious enough. They want to drag the MacArthur controversy out in the open as much as possible and extend the hearings indefinitely in the hope of stirring up and keeping alive a political issue. Any ward politician can see what they are up to. The MacArthur controversy hearings would not be nearly so dramatic if conducted behind the closed doors of executive sessions. No television, radio and pictures to dramatize the scene.

Taft's position illustrates the extent to which political-minded men are willing to go in furthering their aims. It is inconceivable that a majority of the joint committee of inquiry will go along with his views. It seems little short of asinine that such a proposal should be made seriously in the first instance.

"Widely advertised patent medicine has been classified, in some states, as an alcoholic beverage." News item.

In the Spring one needs a tonic... more than other times, I guess... to alleviate the chronic... or sporadic laziness... we recall how our grandmother... in this season would amass... herbs of one kind and another... and the roots of sassafras... and she boiled them in a kettle... to produce some liquid stuff... that would burn its way through metal... if you gave it time enough... She would strain it up and shake it... and despite its bitter taste... all the children had to take it... so it wouldn't go to waste.

Grandpa said that he would fix it... so he got some "rock and rye"... and the way he used to mix it... put a sparkle in his eye... (he was full of aches and wheezes... for he seemed to be a host... to the germs and the diseases... and he always suffered most)... but when he consumed a bottle... he would fight a dozen men... and was strong enough to throttle... Daniel's lions in the den.

Greater men have graced our nation... but to me it's pretty clear... in his day and generation... grandpa was a pioneer... alcohol is such a mixer... of the roots and herbs, no doubt... it would ruin the elixir... if they left the liquor out.

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and his is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."—1 John 5:4.

Albert Steinberg, concertmaster and assistant conductor of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra, is committed to music as a cure for juvenile delinquency.

His plan is simple, that if helping each child to take an active interest in music—learning to play some instrument, or absorbing an understanding of good music by creative listening.

Give him, he says, one hour in the classroom with every child from six years and up and he can cut down juvenile delinquency by 90 per cent.

His goal and method are commendable, suggestive of what can be done in the broader realm of spiritual guidance—must be done, if boys and girls are to develop into well-rounded citizens.

WE WOULD BE ALERT, Master, to the promptings of Thy spirit. O keep us faithful to the highest and the holiest.

Dublin Towns Swap Dailies

Two Dublins, one in Laurens County, Georgia, the other on the Emerald Isle, have exchanged newspapers through a mistake of the postal service. A sugar refiner in New York addressed a booklet to the Dublin (Ga.) Courier-Herald. A postal clerk dropped the packet in a mail bag destined for Dublin, Ireland. The Irish city having no Courier-Herald, the postman there delivered the package to The Dublin Evening Herald. Amused at the mistake, the editor of The Evening Herald took a picture of the address label, ran it in his paper, and mailed the sugar report and a copy of his paper to W. H. Champion, editor of the Georgia daily for which the pamphlet was intended. Reporting on the Irish paper, Editor Champion says it is an eight-page issue, with advertising on the front page reflecting a stringent newsprint situation in Eire.

The Irish daily carries a comic panel for the ladies under the title "These Women" and two other comic strips, "Mutt and Jeff" and "Roy Rogers." What! No "Jiggs and Maggie"?

FICA DOES NOT MEAN "Forced Into Corner Again," says M. C. Jones (Mrs. Johnny Jones) in The Fort Valley Leader-Tribune in advising Georgia housewives that today, April 30, is the deadline for first-quarter returns under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act.

"Contributions" means that you send in 3 per cent of what you have paid cooks, maids, yard-men and baby sitters, provided that said domestic help worked for you at least 24 hours during the first three months of 1951 and earned (or at least were paid) as much as $50. If you deducted 1½ per cent from the pay as you went along, add 1½ per cent to the "deducts." If you didn't deduct, ante up the 3 per cent on your own.

OUTDOOR MAN: "He loves a pine tree better than a rose, a field of clover and Bermuda grass more than his crisp shaven lawn, and the aroma of south Georgia bright leaf tobacco better than Paris perfume, and he had rather have several acres of good Georgia land than money in the bank."

WANTED—DEAD OR ALIVE! So read the posters advertising the hunt for William S. Bonney, or Billy the Kid. Television has made Billy worth more dead than alive. Being able to identify the famous outlaw paid $6,000 on a

"He repeated his reason for leaving... And I told him again that I understood because I did. He was going because he is a soldier, and a soldier obeys orders from his commander, regardless of his own emotions, ambitions and hopes." Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, of the MacArthur's escape from Corregidor, in the Wainwright story first published serially in 1945.

THOMAS L. STOKES

Something Lacking in Leadership

WASHINGTON—This is an interesting calling these days. You get all sorts of invitations, some of the old-fashioned familiar variety. You discover, too, that the art of letter-writing still thrives, and by hand, which is healthy and encouraging. Much abuse comes rolling in over an observation in this place several days ago to the effect that the nation was indulging in an "emotional jag" over Gen. Douglas MacArthur, seeking in him a release from various discontents of these times. One calm fellow, who resented an intimation that folks are excited, proved his perfect equanimity by expressing a desire for personal acquaintance thus: "If you ever come to Stockton look me up and I'll punch you in the puss." California seems a bit far to go looking for trouble.

More acceptable is a similar invitation from Ohio—for two reasons. One, it's closer; two the gentleman in that case is 83 years old and probably would not inflict so much punishment.

"I want someone to tie you up to a post and let me use the toe of my shoe on the seat of your trousers," he writes beneficently. "I bet there would not be enough left for you to sit on."

(There's a lot to start with, sir.)

And so on and on in proof that our people are unexcited and unperturbed.

And what some of them say about Harry Truman!

The psychology of all this becomes clear as the postman arrives day after day. Many people are resorting to a simple device. This is to create a villain on whom to blame everything and raise up a hero, in shining contrast, as when our mothers used to say: "Why don't you be a good boy like Willie." (We knew Willie better than she did.)

Harry Truman becomes the villain. And General MacArthur comes along, and just at the right time, to fill the role of hero, and for that he is, indeed, well-equipped. Besides being a handsome figure of a man with abundant military laurels, he is fresh and new, so to speak, as far as our people are concerned, not a familiar figure with whom we have lived, day after day. His natural glamor is magnified by the glamor and enchantment that distance lends.

Neither man, for the moment, is a human being in the eyes of many people. One is a devil, the other an angel. Harry Truman is disparaged, and often bitterly, and the general is held up in contrast as a paragon of all the virtues.

Obviously, President Truman's stock is low at this time. The issue with the general has provided an outlet for people who are against him anyhow and have been, of which there are a great many. Of such the anti-Truman vote in the close 1948 election is evidence. But this goes further than fixed Republicans and anti-Trumanites.

It should give the President pause.

For the letter writers seize upon something which is just complaint against him and his administration.

They mention, over and over, the RFC expose of political influence, which plainly made a strong impression everywhere, and some refer to the revelation of links between crime and big-city Democratic machines, which also became very vivid in the Kefauver investigation. That offers a text for an indictment which is carelessly and wrongly applied to the whole administration and all its acts.

Some house cleaning and a restatement of moral principles in government are called for—and overdue. For the issues involved in the MacArthur episode are too important to be clouded or confused by unrelated issues that offer distracted targets.

Bearing directly on these issues there is also a lack here. That is in the failure to explain to the people often enough and thoroughly enough the issues in the Korean War and Far East policy. Only recently, after the MacArthur removal, did the President undertake to do this. It should have been done constantly, all along, and needs to be done now.

When people must go out and look for heroes there's something missing in their regularly constituted political leadership.

Who Scalped Whom?

Scalping was unknown to the majority of Americans until the coming of the white man, although it had been practiced since early times by the people of Asia and Europe. A scalping knife was a part of every pioneer's equipment and was freely used. The American colonies offered bounties for Indian scalps. Massachusetts gave $200 for each one turned in if the Indian was more than 12 years of age, and $100 for the scalps of women and children. The official encouragement led to widespread practice of the brutal act. British,

French and Americans were all buying scalps of these enemies. The scalping knife was worked overtime during some of the raids on Indian villages by the early Georgians. In one Indian massacre at Burnt Village, which was located near LaGrange, more than 1,000 Creeks were slaughtered during a raid made in the middle of the night. Once, when the Cherokees were seeking a new treaty, they were told by the military commander that they must bring in the scalps of three young men before the government would be convinced they were acting in good faith!

JOHN GUNTHER

The Family of General MacArthur

Editor's Note: The John Gunther book, "The Riddle of MacArthur," which was written before General MacArthur was fired by Mr. Truman, provides an interesting reflection on the General in view of recent developments.

MacArthur's first wife, whom he married in 1922 when he was 42, was Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks, stepdaughter of the Philadelphia millionaire, Edward T. Stotesbury. MacArthur met her when he was superintendent at West Point. His family, though comfortably fixed, was an Army family and not rich; now he was hurled upward into multimillionaire society. He did not like it much. MacArthur is not gregarious; he is austere; he does not care for upper-bracket excesses and trivialities. Nor did Mrs. MacArthur enjoy life in the Philippines, which she apparently thought was the equivalent of transatlantic Gaul. She divorced him in Reno in 1929. MacArthur does not mention her in his biography in Who's Who.

In 1935 Mrs. MacArthur, the general's aged mother, journeyed out to Manila to see her son, and on shipboard met a youthful, charming Southern lady named Jean Marie Faircloth of Murfreesboro, Tenn. Miss Faircloth, born to wealth, was taking a cruise around the world. MacArthur's mother, a Southerner herself, liked her, thought that she would be an ideal wife for her son, and asked her to stop off in Manila.

The general and Miss Faircloth fell in love and were married in New York (at the City Hall) on April 30, 1937. The MacArthurs returned to Manila, and neither has touched the American mainland since. Mrs. MacArthur is 19 years younger than her husband. They have one son, Arthur, born in Manila, who is 12.

Mrs. MacArthur is animated, dark, neat, pretty and alert. She misses nothing. She is vitally important to her husband's life; he is crazy about her, and she worships him. She calls him not "Douglas," nor by any nickname, but "General," but this is not an example of stuffiness or awe of her husband; rather it represents a type of traditional Southern courtesy. Nevertheless, it is something of a shock to hear her address him as "General" across an informal luncheon table.

Mrs. MacArthur takes a good deal of the load off the supreme commander's shoulders. She represents him at multitudinous social functions (to which he never goes at all), pays his respects to various dignitaries, and, when he entertains at the Embassy, is a perceptive hostess. As a rule she awaits her luncheon guests in the large Embassy drawing room, alone or with Colonel Huff, and talks to them with cheerful high spirits till—sometimes half an hour later—the supreme commander enters.

As he comes in the door, which is a tidy distance away, she utters a mild exclamation like, "Why, there is the General!"—almost as if he were an unexpected visitor. He advances rapidly, grasps her, says "Jeanie . . . Darling!" and kisses her warmly, in front of the guests, as if they had not seen one another for weeks, though they have in all probability not been separated for more than two or three hours.

During lunch she carefully assists in giving the guests voice, in case they are too timid to talk or in the event that the general's eloquence is in full majestic flow, by interrupting gently and saying, "But, General, Mr. X wants to ask you about this-or-that." Previously, before he has entered, she has found out tactfully what subjects the guest is most eager to discuss.

Mrs. MacArthur maintains her role without the slightest pretension. At parties she does nothing to differentiate herself from other officers' wives, though, of course, people new to Tokyo feel a certain thrill when she enters and the assemblage whispers, "Mrs. MacArthur has arrived." She stands in line to cash a check at the bank like anybody else, shops at the PX, asks no special privileges, and is universally admired.

In her husband's actual work she takes little part, except that, for a period, she read and clipped the American magazines for him. If she has ever felt that his strange working hours make it difficult to maintain an easy household routine, she has never given a sign of it. In plain fact, she probably sees more of him than do most wives of husbands who work a conventional nine-to-five day.

Their boy, Arthur, is a handsome, alert, somewhat delicate child who is the utter apple of his father's eye. This young American, now approaching 13, has (a) never seen his own homeland, (b) never gone to school. The main reason is his father's insatiably protective love—he does not want to be separated from him even briefly, and hates to submit him to the hurly-burly of such schools as Tokyo can provide. Some years ago Arthur broke his arm skating. "The general," I heard it put, "went crazy." The fracture was simple, with no complications of any kind, yet the youngster was hospitalized for days, and the supreme commander demanded that dozens of X-rays be taken—one or two would have been enough. Of course, the hospital was turned upside down, because MacArthur interrupted his own routine to visit him every day. The child has not been permitted to go skating since.

Arthur, so I heard it said, is deliberately kept from being a genius. Whenever he shows a special aptitude for something, this is discouraged, so that he will grow up as a strictly normal youngster.

The chief thing to report about him scholastically, at the moment, is that he is a bit slow with his spelling. For a time, growing up in Brisbane, he spoke with an Australian accent; now it has a British tinge. Arthur has few playmates; it happens that not many parents in the general's periphery have children of his age. He has three dogs, of which he is very fond.

Once General Whitely got an urgent call from MacArthur early in the morning; he found him in his son's bedroom, wearing an old West Point blanket as a bathrobe, and playing with Arthur and all three dogs. The general sees the boy first thing every morning and instantly on his return to the Embassy at night. Members of the entourage think that on Saturdays they may have a good chance of getting away from the office early, say by 8:30 p. m. instead of the usual 9 or 9:30, because on that evening father and son customarily see a movie together, and the general is prompt in arriving home.

For some years the person closest to Arthur, next to his parents, was the Chinese nurse, Ah Chu (pronounced Ah Ju). She is a remarkably attractive old character, who cannot read or write.

After the family settled in Tokyo Mrs. MacArthur found Arthur a tutor in the person of Mrs. Phyllis Gibbons, known universally as "Gibby." Mrs. Gibbons was a schoolteacher in the Philippines, of British nationality, who got caught by the Japanese there and who spent three years to a day, from Dec. 28, 1941, to Dec. 28, 1944, in an internment camp in Baguio. "Gibby," a tall lady of great distinction, is as close to the MacArthurs as anybody, and no one is more highly valued. She is the queen of the MacArthur "court," and a delightful person.

The boy, too, is devoted to her, and she adores him. ("He's a nice youngster. Such a lot of nonsense has been written about him. He's very nice. I'm teaching him American geography now out of your 'Inside U.S.A.'") Many people in Tokyo, anxious for the MacArthur favor, treat the boy as if he were a veritable crown prince. But there is no nonsense like that with "Gibby." Her whole effort is to make him as normal and unspoiled as possible.

Some day, of course, young Arthur will have to go away to school. He will necessarily have to have competition and external discipline, no matter how efficient Mrs. Gibbons' regime is.

Hope Endureth All Things

Hope must be the most indestructible quality mankind possesses. It is certainly the funniest, the saddest, the most beautiful. We thought it was funny when we watched our 7-year-old Mary working away with her puppy, Lucky, trying to teach him to do tricks to the tune of glowing promises about how he was going to get on a television program, thereby making them both rich and famous. "Don't you want to be on television, Lucky?" she demanded. For answer Lucky hunted an elusive flea with his hind foot and gave her his most doleful-doggy look. "Sure you do," she said encouragingly. "You're the best dog in the world and you can do tricks. Shake hands!" Lucky promptly rolled over on his back and let his tongue loll out of the side of his mouth, groaning at her in mock agony.

"That's a good dog!" cried Mary, desperately grabbing one of the paws that wobbled loosely in the air. "See, Mother, he's going to be a television star."

We know and Lucky knows that he has no intention of learning tricks and being a television star. His one intellectual achievement is to beg for food. But Mary lives on hope and devotes many little girl-hours every day to grooming Lucky for his debut.

Less funny is the hope of the elderly woman we wrote about a couple of Sundays ago. She lives on a slim relief check and manages to have a whale of a good time doing it. Readers who liked her spunk sent gifts to her and when we sought to deliver them she accepted them only on the condition that she could pass them on to "somebody less fortunate."

"Look," she said, "I'm all right. I have enough. A lot of people have less. Besides, there isn't a day I live that I don't wake up thinking something perfectly wonderful may happen. That's as good as having a million dollars."

And then there's the patient, good Negro woman we know who has worked against great odds to rear her six children. She has done without food and clothing and worked long hours to keep them in school, happy that they were getting a better education than she had. She visualized for them good jobs and nice homes and a respected place in the Negro community. But her only daughter had to stop school to give birth to an illegitimate baby. For a time the woman was weighted down with grief and disappointment but when the baby came she rallied.

"You can't be sad 'bout a new baby," she said. "We'll keep him and love him and maybe he have a better chance than his mama have. You can't tell 'bout babies. He might be another Booker T. Washington or Dr. Carver."

Maybe it's a palliative, self-created to keep us from going mad with the troubles and frustrations around us. Maybe it's a childish escape device. Whatever it is, we're glad that hope is so indestructible.

You Dream of a Pony Twice in Life

In the Louisville News and Farmer

Though he is a grown man now, his eyes were misty when he told me about it, and his voice was roughed up at the edges by an emotion that is half-sad, only half-understood. He laughed a bit and said that the reason he felt sad was that the instance reminded him of how he used to weep when he read "Black Beauty." He was driving down the road, he said, and two little boys riding a pony dashed across the road in front of him. One fleeting glance assured him that the pony was the one he used to own some 13 or 14 years ago.

He said, "The pony looked just the same and that made me feel queer because I don't look just the same, and nothing here at home is just the same either." Then we both laughed because we remembered how at first he was reprimanded because he wanted to ride when he should have been studying, and later when the new had worn off, he was reprimanded because he never wanted to ride and the pony was eating his head off and never getting any exercise.

"After all of these years the pony still has a classy look," he said. Then we laughed again because we remembered that the old woman used to throw in a word every now and then about the pony's many faults, but the man of the house, always practical, and always a farmer at heart, used to say, "That's a fine little pony. I bet he could make a crop right now."

The glimpse of the pony galloping down the road brought back all sorts of memories, recollections of days that went racing by, faster than the galloping feet of a spotted pony. Memories of days that did not seem too wondrously happy at the time, but now, viewed through the years, so very sweet and happy and serene.

A pony is a mighty fine thing for a boy to have," he said pensively. "I hope in a few years I will be able to buy one."

The words had a familiar ring. Fifteen years ago, was it, that we added up the cost of corn per bushel, plus purchase price for the pony? . . . (The hands of the clock go round and round. It is high noon for some. For others it is midnight.) You dream of a pony twice in life . . . and in between times, the years go flying by like a little runaway pony, ears back and mane flying in the wind.

Who said You can't Afford a Fine Car?

WHEN you look at everything a ROADMASTER has to offer, it's natural to conclude that it's priced with the rest of the fine-car field. Sweeping proudly past you, it has a distinction that few cars can equal. Stepping nimbly away from a stop light, it has the willing surge of power that the very exclusive combination of a 152-horsepower Fireball engine and Dynaflo Drive* delivers. It rides the road with majestic smoothness, and comes to a smooth and gentle halt, in response to the finest brakes that Buick engineers ever developed. Inside, it has spacious room, from side to side and front to back and seat to roof—plus a softness of cushions and a richness of fabrics which bespeak the custom standards to which it is built. All you could want in a fine car is here in abundance. But don't let that mislead you into deciding "it's too rich for me." If you've looked into 1951 car prices generally, you'll discover this: You can own a ROADMASTER for just a shade more than an ordinary car will cost—and for several hundred dollars less than the price tags usually found in "the fine-car field."

Why not look into this today?

Lower Draft Predicted For June

Hershey Cites Future Needs

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP) Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey Sunday predicted a low draft call for June.

Hershey said the nation is entering a period, likely to last several months, in which Selective Service needs should be comparatively light. He said this time will be used for a maximum amount of training of men already in service.

"We are in a soft period of manpower needs, much more so than two years from now when replacements start," he added.

Speaking over a radio network (Liberty), Hershey pointed out that the April draft call was reduced from 80,000 to 40,000, and the May call from 60,000 to 40,000.

"There has been no June call yet, but it is a fair assumption that it will be low," he said.

A cospeaker with Hershey on the "youth and the draft" program said college men who want to get in on the first of the forthcoming aptitude tests May 26 must get applications at their draft boards immediately.

He was Dr. William Turnbull, vice president of the educational testing service which will administer the tests. Resultant scores may be used by draft boards, along with scholastic records, to determine the student's fitness for deferment. The boards will have the final say.

Turnbull said students who are slow in applying will find all the early places filled, and must take the June 16 or June 30 tests.

He said 140,000 applications have been received at the Princeton, N. J., testing headquarters to date, somewhat less than had been expected in the initial push. He predicted that more than 500,000 eventually will apply.

Tickets of admission to test centers are being mailed out within three to five days of receipt of the applications, Turnbull said.

No Comment, Says Aly Khan

CANNES, France, April 29—(AP)—"Nothing to say," was all Prince Aly Khan would say Sunday to reporters asking for comment about Rita Hayworth's announcement Saturday that she is going to get a "legal and permanent" separation. Previously he had persistently denied that a separation was being considered.

The reporters caught up with Aly at the Martinez Hotel here, where he was attending a banquet of Legionnaires. The prince, son and heir of Aga Khan, fabulously wealthy leader of the world's Ismaili Moslems, is a knight of the French Legion of Honor.

The prince and the movie star were married on the French Riviera on May 27, 1949. They have a daughter, Yasmin, born Dec. 12, 1949. Rita reached New York on April 2 and Aly announced at the time he would join her there soon.

Dictionary Saves Corporal's Life

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Cal., April 29—(INS)—Air Force Corporal Charles L. Fultz owed his life Sunday to a Spanish-English dictionary he carried in his back pocket.

Fultz is in Edwards Air Force Base Hospital with a broken arm and severe scalp lacerations suffered when he was sucked into the air scoop of an F-86 jet fighter.

The vacuum cleaner effect of the engine tore the pages out of the dictionary and the paper covered the intake screen enough to keep Fultz from being killed.

Argentina Nabs Reds

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, April 29—(AP)—Police Saturday arrested 47 men and women in the city of Cordoba whom they named as Communists and charged with planning unauthorized May Day street demonstrations. The Communist party is legal in Argentina, but police alleged the group violated public security.

Noise Reduces Efficiency of Work

Noise is a terror to efficiency everywhere. It's a hindrance to restful sleep and one cause of indigestion. In fact, noise is a pretty harmful factor in life as a whole. As our cities become noisier, occupational deafness becomes a more common ailment. Taxi drivers, printers, road builders, factory workers all are easy prey for this trouble. No matter if they think they are accustomed to noise, it does affect their hearing.

Clatter of machines in offices cuts down production efficiency rate of the staffs from a potential 100 percent to 30 percent. And in cities it is even sometimes impossible to escape from constant noise during sleep.

Tallulah Club Announces Scholarships

Election of Mrs. Sandford Pottinger as President, and the announcement of two scholarships of the Young Matrons Circle for Tallulah Falls Friday at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Mrs. Richard de Gollan, chairman, announced that the Lamar Trotti, Jr., Memorial Scholarship at the University of Georgia was given by Lamar Trotti, of Hollywood, Calif., formerly of Atlanta, in memory of his young son. It will be available to students at Tallulah. Student selection will be based on character, general deportment, scholarship, and authorship of an essay on Tolerance. Mr. Trotti, screen writer, authored the script of "I'd Climb the Highest Mountain."

Mrs. de Gollan also announced establishment of a scholarship at the school in honor of Mrs. Alvin Barge, Jr., past president of the circle. The award will be known as the Betty Fleetwood Barge Scholarship. To date $1,768.50 had been collected by the scholarship committee. Mrs. J. Arch Avery, Jr., treasurer, presented a check for $3,000 to Mrs. J. T. deJarnette, Executive Secretary of the school, to be used for maintenance. It was announced that $100 would establish life membership for the Circle matrons.

Mrs. Pottinger's first official act was the appointment of Mrs. R. Howard Dobbs as membership chairman. Her corps of officers include Mrs. Pope Fuller, first Vice-President; Mrs. John Mount, Jr., recording secretary; Mrs. Nat Harrison, Jr., corresponding secretary and Mrs. J. Arch Avery, Jr., Treasurer.

If you have had trouble with them perhaps these suggestions and this basic recipe will help.

The most influential factors in obtaining desirable meringues are: the extent of beating the egg white, the time of adding the sugar, the method of adding sugar, the baking time and temperature, and the proportion of sugar to egg white.

HOWS AND WHYS
1. Egg whites should be at room temperature before beating because a greater volume is obtained at room temperature than when colder.

2. Salt is added to the whites to aid in increasing foaming and stiffness.

3. An acid as cream of tartar is recommended to produce more stable foam and to increase tenderness.

4. Sugar should be added after egg whites are beaten stiff but not dry.

5. Extra fine sugar is best because it dissolves in the egg white more quickly.

6. Sugar stabilizes the egg white foam and should be added slowly and beaten thoroughly dissolved.

7. Hand-operated beaters are recommended for making meringues.

8. To obtain crisp, tender meringues they should be dried in the oven instead of baked. Use a very low temperature at first then turn off heat and let them dry.

Here is our fool-proof meringue shell recipe. Little spoonfuls make the meringue kisses; large spoonfuls make the shells for the base of desserts.

MERINGUE SHELLS
4 egg whites
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup fine granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Eggs should be at room temperature. Beat egg whites until they foam. Sprinkle with salt and cream of tartar. Continue beating until whites are stiff. Begin adding sugar 2 table-spoons at a time and continuing the beating until all the sugar is added and the mixture is very stiff. Fold in vanilla. Cover cookie sheets with heavy paper. With spoon shape in large mounds about 2 inches apart. Hollow out the center of each meringue. Bake in a very slow oven, 275 degrees, for 40 minutes, then turn off the heat and leave in the oven for 1 hour without opening the door at any time. Remove from oven and handle carefully when removing from the paper. Makes 10 meringues.

Just before serving fill shells with fresh fruit, ice cream, custard cream filling, or cover with a dessert sauce.

Layout Cuts Upkeep

The upkeep on lawns can be kept to a minimum if the lawn is laid out with the upkeep in mind.

Keep large areas free for fast, easy mowing by arranging flower beds, shrubs and walks in clumps, or along the edge. Brick, wood, or stone borders for paths will cut down hand-trimming. Make paths slightly higher in the center than at the edges for good drainage, and sink most of the edging underground.

Why Dull Life's Joys With Alcohol?

Man is a fool, says Dr. Harry E. Ungerleider, medical director of a life insurance company, to drink alcoholic beverages before he is 40. He is a fool not to drink after he is 40. Of course, the doctor adds, the daily intake of whisky, wine, etc., should never exceed three ounces.

I quote Dr. Ungerleider's view from a newspaper item and if the newspaper reporter didn't quote the doctor correctly it will merely go to show that medical societies should not be so eager to get newspaper publicity for members or guests who sound off at meetings.

Dr. Ungerleider is right, I think, as far as he goes, but he doesn't go far enough. I could agree with him if he would make it 60 instead of 40. Forty is too young for any one to begin using any narcotic to make himself temporarily unaware or less aware of his decline, his inadequacy, his incompetence or other inferiority.

As a general rule a man still has responsibilities, domestic, business, professional, civic, military, social or whatever, long after he has passed 40. As long as he has such responsibilities it is a sin, it should be crime for him to indulge in any form of narcotic.

In calling alcoholic beverages and liquors narcotic I'm not just being stuffy or ascetic. It is a scientific fact that alcohol in any dose acts as a depressant to the nerve and higher brain centers from first to last, and never as a stimulant or tonic. Don't take my word for this—consult any recognized authority on pharmacology or therapeutics.

When a man has passed 60 he may have his glass of wine or liquor as Dr. Ungerleider suggests—provided, of course, he has retired to the chimney corner and no longer attempts to exercise judgment in any matter involving the well being or interests of other persons.

Unless the man of 60 is dying faster than a man should—remember we all begin to die the instant we attain the peak of growth and development, for this is the way of physical degeneration—he will very likely feel fine and dandy, and when one feels like that why dull one's enjoyment of life with a narcotic?

Women Engineers Much Needed

"Twenty-three thousand women are needed as engineers" comes the word from a chemical engineer who ought to know. Karl Kammermeyer, head of chemical engineering at the State University of Iowa says: "Any woman who can cook can be a good engineer. She is experienced in avoiding cuts, burns and other accidents in organizing her work. She could perform well in such fields as design, research, sales and service."

"By 1954," adds Mr. Kammermeyer, "only 9,000 engineers will be graduated while the need exists for at least 30,000."

Don't Rush Child Into Encyclopedias

If you expect your child to use an encyclopedia by himself, wait to expose him until he reaches the fifth or sixth grade. This is the advice of Miss Mary Frances Cox, head of the boys' and girls' department of the downtown Public Library.

"Fifth or sixth grade is as early as children are expected to use encyclopedias," said Miss Cox. "And that is soon enough to get a good set for home use."

Miss Cox also feels that children should get the "library habit" soon after they learn to read. This would mean at about the first grade level.

"Many children of pre-school age accompany their parents to the library," she said, "and that gets them enthusiastic about libraries. As soon as they can write their own names we will issue cards and allow them to check out books."

Books that every child should know before he enters school were listed by Miss Cox as follows:

"The Mother Goose rhymes, of course. And parents should take care in choosing the edition. Some editions are designed with boys in mind . . . others for girls."

"The Beatrix Potter books about Peter Rabbit are in the classics class. Every child loves them."

"Winnie-the-Pooh books by Milne are either extremely pleasant reading, or are disliked by the children. There's no middle ground on Pooh . . . imaginative little ones find him irresistible."

LEADER—Miss Violet T. Black, national treasurer of the WCTU, of Evanston, Ill., with Mrs. Blanche Butts, national corresponding secretary, will conduct a two-day workshop beginning Monday at the First Baptist Church, with delegates and visitors here from eight states. The Georgia WCTU, of which Mrs. H. W. Birdsong, of Athens is president, will honor the two leaders at a reception Monday afternoon.

Noise Reduces Efficiency of Work

Noise is a terror to efficiency everywhere. It's a hindrance to restful sleep and one cause of indigestion. In fact, noise is a pretty harmful factor in life as a whole. As our cities become noisier, occupational deafness becomes a more common ailment. Taxi drivers, printers, road builders, factory workers all are easy prey for this trouble. No matter if they think they are accustomed to noise, it does affect their hearing.

Clatter of machines in offices cuts down production efficiency rate of the staffs from a potential 100 percent to 30 percent. And in cities it is even sometimes impossible to escape from constant noise during sleep.

Layout Cuts Upkeep

The upkeep on lawns can be kept to a minimum if the lawn is laid out with the upkeep in mind.

Keep large areas free for fast, easy mowing by arranging flower beds, shrubs and walks in clumps, or along the edge. Brick, wood, or stone borders for paths will cut down hand-trimming. Make paths slightly higher in the center than at the edges for good drainage, and sink most of the edging underground.

Amusing, feeding and dressing 20-month-old Debby is fun for 16-year-old Anne—but it's plain scene stealing for the cuddlesome toddler when it comes to picturing Anne's afternoon duties. Left, Anne stops practicing her music to give Debby two hands at the keyboard. The lively youngster can't play a tune, but she can parrot songs and the alphabet, and is already a conversationalist in her own right. That open mouth in the next picture shows just how big Debby's appetite is. Anne keeps the cereal bowl out of reach of baby-

IT'S A FAMILY AFFAIR IN SWEDEN

Margareta and Jan Olsson, Swedish writers, read Constitution's Home and Family page.

Constitution Reminds Swede
Of Home-Town Newspapers

By SCARLETT BLANTON

A tall stylish young woman with a pleasant laugh, and hair the color of corn silk tucked her string gloves in the pocket of her red plaid jacket, crossed her plaid ballerina-shod feet, and began talking.

From all appearances she might have been a sophomore from Agnes Scott, or the girl your brother invited to the annual weekend houseparty. But she wasn't.

She is in fact Margareta Olsson, a brilliant young editorial writer for the newspaper, "Expressen" of Stockholm, Sweden. Margareta and her husband, Jan Olof, who incidentally is a feature and news writer for a rival paper, the "Dagens Nyheter," are touring this country on a 51-day bus trip.

Margareta was fascinated, as was the staff of the Home and Family Department, with the parallel between the Constitution and her paper, the "Expressen."

The "Expressen" started a section comparable to the Home and Family department early last fall. Margareta said that such a thing had never been done in Sweden before, and their section, devoted to news and service for the entire family, was causing a mild sensation.

They carry columns by food experts, advice to gardeners, home decorating help, news from child psychologists, and fashion hints for the entire family.

Margareta, who until recently was editor of this family page, says one of its main purposes is service and the promotion of family readership.

As for fashion, "Swedish women always under-dress," says Margareta. Their taste is very simple, very plain. Their whole ensemble is almost severe. They favor low-heeled shoes, and berets instead of hats. Greta Garbo is a famous example.

"I only have one hat," Margareta commented, smiling broadly. "It was really just a half-hat, all red roses and veil . . . my wedding hat! I haven't worn it since . . . it's up in the attic."

In its stead she carried a soft felt beret.

Bright color is a rarity in Sweden, she said. They wear "navy in Summer, black in Winter, and gray in between."

The shoes are made in only one width, and the leather is not particularly soft or flexible, but the style is good. Many Swedish women import their shoes as well as their beautiful tweeds, from England. Pure silks aren't a very good grade, but the nylons when they can be had, are "marvelous."

Courtesy Can Hurt
If Too Headlong

Think twice before you perform some "courteous" act for an older woman. Your thoughtfulness may hurt her feelings.

Especially among working women, it is not the age that crushes. It is being made to feel that you are old and doddering. And though few women in their 60s are helpless relics these days, they are constantly congratulated on how well they bear up under added years.

One of the most annoying attentions to a woman along in years is to have some younger person take her elbow to help her upstairs or down.

"Have you ever tried walking upstairs with someone hanging on your arm?" asks one sixtyish lady.

So, if an older woman is still capable of earning her own living, be sure for sure she can cross a street or climb a flight of stairs with no assistance. Treat her as you would a contemporary, unless she shows she likes respect for advanced years.

fat hands for, there's no coaxing always-hungry Debby to eat. She really goes after food. Dressing Debby is no problem for Anne, right, but Debby bites her tongue as if she alone were exerting all the effort in putting on her shoes and socks. Anne earned the State's Homemaker degree in 1950; served as vice-president of the Fourth District, 1950-51, speaking at other district meetings during the year. Five years a homemaker, Anne helped revise the State FHA constitution; was a delegate to the White House Conference on Youth and Children; panel participant at the State PTA convention and speaker at Georgia Family Life conference. A student leader at Murphy High, Anne is in the dramatics club, the mixed choir, on newspaper and annual staffs, senior

YOUNG ATLANTA

Future Homemakers Hold
Sixth Annual Convention

By PAT LIVINGSTON

Georgia Future Homemakers light a sixth birthday candle at their state convention in Atlanta this weekend.

Completing its most successful year, the association meets Friday and Saturday at the Ansley, with delegates from 336 chapters attending, a gain of 54 since the last meeting.

Banded together, high school homemaker students in FHA have taken part in numerous ventures; strengthening world friendship through the adoption of home-making classes in other lands.

A new appreciation of home life has been theirs this year with the organization's special emphasis on girls working and playing with their own families.

Gwendolyn Moore, Wadley, state president, will preside at the opening meeting, the banquet and business session. District Vice-Presidents, Margaret Benton, Monticello; Ann Morris, Reidville; Anne Walker, Atlanta; Jane Chappell, Plains; and Mary Lela Gilbert, Vienna, will conduct other sessions.

Thirteen State Homemaker Degrees will be conferred at Talent Night, Friday, along with a fashion show and skit featuring the six past state presidents.

Reports from all committees; adoption of the new constitution and by-laws, and presentation of honor-roll awards are part of Saturday morning's activity, followed by luncheon at the Town House for retiring and new officers, and a tour of the Cyclorama and Stone Mountain.

The Inez Murray awards, two scholarships in home economics, will be named at Saturday night's banquet in the Dinkler Room. State PTA President, Mrs. Ralph Hobbs, is featured speaker.

Six Fulton County high schools took part in ROTC recognition ceremonies at West Fulton High School Wednesday. Twenty-two outstanding cadets received service awards.

Best Cadet Colonel rating went to Shannon Granger, North Fulton. Tops in two classes was Cadet Capt. Buddy Upshaw, North Fulton, named best-drilled company commander and outstanding company commander.

Awards went to First Lieut. Dick Mitchell, Hapeville, for the best-drilled platoon; Sgt. Joe DeLany, North Fulton, for the best-drilled squad, and Pvt. W. D. Spradley, Hapeville, as best-drilled individual.

Enjoying a Confederate Memorial Day week end were all schools attending perfect teeth in the city system since spring holidays. Those just out for a day went down town for a morning's shopping and the parade, or to the parks for a ball game.

Little Flies Big Pests
When Summer Comes

Struggle with the housefly won't be any easier this summer.

The military is taking 25 per cent of all DDT supplies and not much screening will be made this year. Spray now for best results later. . . it's the little flies who get away that cause the trouble in future months.

Ray of hope: A new insecticide from roots of the common oxeye plant promises to be better than DDT.

Stop Feuding, Douglas Asks, To Avert War

WASHINGTON, April 29.—(U.P.) Sen. Paul Douglas, Democrat, Illinois, warned Sunday that only a "miracle" can prevent World War III and called on Americans to stop feuding over the ouster of Gen. MacArthur.

Douglas joined Republican Leader Harold E. Stassen in appealing to the nation to close ranks and forego a bitter partisan battle over foreign policy in a time of grave world crisis.

But his plea appeared destined to get the same cold reception from both sides which greeted Stassen's proposal Saturday that President Truman and MacArthur hold a "reconciliation" meeting.

Douglas noted that the MacArthur controversy already has engendered so much heat that Sen. Taft, Republican, Ohio, has publicly denounced the joint chiefs of staff and their chairman, Gen. Omar N. Bradley.

Assuming that such attacks are rocking the ship of state at a perilous time, Douglas said:

"It will be a miracle if we keep the peace, in view of Russia's constant determination to conquer the world."

He added that the best hope of avoiding war lies in "becoming stronger enough, quickly enough, and said that task requires all American shoulders to the same wheel."

Orthodox Easter Service At Russian Monastery

By HARRISON E. SALISBURY
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

ZAGORSK, USSR, April 29.—The iron bells of Troitski Monastery pealed out early Sunday the eternal tidings of Christ's resurrection to thousands of believers assembled on these sacred grounds for Orthodox Easter services.

The ceremony was little changed from that observed in what was then the remote and desolate Russian forest of Troitski's founder, St. Sergei Radonetsky, in 1340.

Troitski monastery, or Lavra, is one of the holiest of all Russia. Its most ancient cathedral, Troitski Sabor, was built 70 years before Columbus discovered America and here, in a magnificent silver chandelier, rest the bones of St. Sergei himself—regarded by true believers as among the most potent of all relics of the Orthodox Church.

Thousands of believers and spectators jammed the great monastery enclosures and the three cathedrals for the Easter services.

BLESS EASTER EGGS
In the lavishly decorated Trapezhaya chapel, hundreds of believers formed lines waiting for priests to bless their Easter cakes—kulich and paska—and their brightly colored Easter eggs.

The cakes were carried in glistening white linen kerchiefs, and each believer clutched a small rose, yellow, green, and red, which illumined the peasant faces like a scene from some pageant of remote times.

A bearded priest, carrying a golden cross and holy water, passed down the line blessing the cakes while an acolyte with a great wicker basket accompanied him to receive offerings from the believers.

KISS PRIEST'S HAND
In another part of the chapel, before a gilt fretwork altar door that gleamed ruby red from the ceremonial lights, a long stream of believers kissed the sacred ikon, then the Bible and then the hand of the venerable white-bearded priest, who bestowed a blessing upon them. Some prostrated themselves again and again as they left the holy spot.

As the midnight hour approached the great doors of Uspenski Cathedral swung open and a procession of priests, carrying glittering ikons, sacred church banners and flambeaus, and swinging censers, made its way through the ranks of the believers, whose candles glistered like fireflies in the still night air.

High above the procession, the great onion-shaped towers of the church, freshly painted in blue and spattered with golden stars, gleamed against a brilliant April midnight sky.

From the assembled masses came a low and mournful chant of the Orthodox liturgy, suddenly rising to a joyous pitch as the iron bells of the great kolokolnya, or bell tower, built in the 18th century by Rastrelpi, rang out the tidings "Khristos Voskre—Christ Is Risen."

Israel Solon, Wife, Held at Ellis Island

New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

NEW YORK, April 29.—Arieh Ben-Eliezer, a member of the Israeli parliament, and his wife were detained by the United States immigration authorities upon their arrival at the International Airport at Idlewild from Paris Sunday. Ben-Eliezer is a former leader of the Irgun underground forces in Israel.

Peter Esperdy, an enforcement officer of the Immigration Service, said Ben-Eliezer's trouble stemmed from having the wrong kind of visa and that under the circumstances Mrs. Ben-Eliezer's visa was also not in order. The Israeli legislator and his wife were taken to Ellis Island and it was said there that a hearing in their case would be held Monday.

Ben-Eliezer was one of a group of Irgun Zvai Leumi adherents who attempted unsuccessfully to establish an embassy for the "Hebrew nation in Palestine" in Washington in 1944.

In explaining Ben-Eliezer's visa difficulties, Esperdy said that the former Irgun leader had a transit visa which would allow him to pass through this country en route to either Mexico or Venezuela, but that he did not have a visa permitting him to enter either of those two countries. It was Ben-Eliezer's "avowed purpose" to spend three weeks in the United States and such a stay required a visitor's visa, Esperdy explained.

2 Shot Dead In Same Hour

Two Atlanta Negroes were slain within a 25-minute period Sunday, police reported, one of them in a shooting that allegedly grew out of a previous slaying.

Robert Byrd, 24, of 33 Hilliard St., N. E., was shot to death in what apparently was the aftermath of the fatal shooting of his father, police reported. Police said Jessie James Negro, of 357 English Ave., N. W., told them Byrd came to his backyard about 10:50 a. m. Sunday where James and James Bolton, 21-year-old Negro of 87 North Ave., N. W., were talking.

James said Byrd told Bolton "I'm ready to settle it now" and put his hand into a pocket. Bolton pulled out a .32-caliber automatic pistol and sent a slug into Byrd's right side, James added.

Police records quoted Bolton as saying the Sunday shooting grew out of the death of Byrd's father as the result of a shot fired at him Easter Sunday by Bolton's father.

Another Negro, Ed Evans, 45, of 758 Terry St., S. E., was stabbed to death about 11:25 a. m. Sunday by his wife, police said. Officers reported Evans' wife, listed as Pearl Hill, 49, told them she stabbed her husband to prevent his beating her.

8 Firms Damaged By Alabama Fire

PRATTVILLE, Ala., April 29.—(U.P.)—A fire which was believed to have started from defective wiring roared through five buildings in the downtown section of Prattville early Sunday. A sixth structure was damaged by smoke and water.

No deaths or injuries were reported from the blaze which began about midnight and was brought under control approximately an hour later.

Texas, N. Y. Pastors Open Session Here

A forceful Texas Baptist and a quiet New York Presbyterian Sunday delivered the opening sermons of the annual Tabernacle Bible Conference at the Baptist Tabernacle here.

Dr. Marshall Craig, pastor of the Gaston Avenue Baptist Church, Dallas, Tex., spoke to approximately 1,500 persons at the morning worship. Dr. John H. McCorm, pastor of the Broadway Presbyterian Church, New York City, taught three adult classes.

At the evening service, Dr. McCorm, who has been a participant in every conference since 1948, told approximately 1,200 persons of three points in his belief of "the second coming of Christ." He spoke on Bible teaching of the bodily return of Christ, said that "the people's love of Jesus shows they want him to return," and emphasized the need of Christians to show the world.

Dr. Craig told this evening audience that "there is only one way to salvation, and that is through Christ."

The Bible Conference will continue through Friday with services at 11:30 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 7:45 p. m., and 8:30 p. m. It will conclude the two regular services Sunday.

Other participants in the 1951 sessions of the 50-year-old Conference will include Dr. Wilbur M. Smith, Fuller Theological Seminary, Pasadena, Calif.; Dr. James McGinley, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Carlton Booth, song leader from the Providence, R. I., Bible Institute.

Emphasis during the conference is on expository teaching rather than evangelism, Harry P. Wootan, educational director of the Tabernacle, explained.

Jap Freighter Asks Removal Of Crewmen

STEWART'S POINT, Calif., April 29.—(U.P.)—Preparations were being made Sunday night to remove the 54 crew members of the grounded Japanese freighter Kenkou Maru by breeches buoy as high winds and heavy seas threatened to break up the vessel.

Rescue equipment was dispatched from the Point Arena life boat station, 18 miles from here, after the Coast Guard received a radio message from the ship's master.

Headquarters of the 12th Coast Guard District in San Francisco said it received a message from the vessel saying, "request breeches buoy rigged from beach soonest."

The freighter ran hard aground in a heavy fog Saturday night. The Coast Guard said earlier Sunday that the Kenkou Maru would probably break up if it was not freed in the next 24 hours.

'Bigger Show May Come,' Admiral Says

By LEIF ERICKSON
HONOLULU, April 29.—(U.P.)—Adm. Arthur W. Radford said Sunday Mat. Gen. Oliver P. Smith, of the Marines, is needed at home "to get ready for the bigger show that may come in the future."

The Admiral's remark about a possible "bigger show" than the Korean War was made as he pinned the Distinguished Service Medal on Smith, commander of the U. S. First Marine Division in Korea until last week.

Radford praised Smith's "inspiration and leadership."

Smith earlier expressed confidence that the current Chinese offensive would be stopped.

Radford said Smith had wanted earnestly to remain with his division in Korea, but that the General is more needed back here to get ready for the bigger show that may come in the future.

The Admiral did not elaborate on the statement.

Barkley Predicts MacArthur Quiz

EL PASO, Texas, April 29. (INS)—Vice President Barkley asked the American people to "withhold judgment" on the Truman-MacArthur controversy until they have gotten all the facts and the truth.

The Vice President, who was in El Paso to address a campaign for United Jewish Appeal, spoke at a civic luncheon.

Barkley said that congressional committees will ask Gen. MacArthur and others many questions to get to the facts about what has been done and why. He commented:

"As Vice President, I haven't been asked to discuss the question publicly since as President of the Senate I must speak impartially. But the committees will hold joint hearings and they will make every effort to get at the truth of this unfortunate, regrettable event."

Ashcraft Reported Still Gravely Ill

The condition of Lee Ashcraft was still "serious" Sunday night, according to Emory Hospital reports. The family of the prominent Atlanta businessman also reported "no change" in his condition since Saturday night.

In 1900 American farms produced each year about one sixth of the value of their land and equipment. By 1950 they were producing annually almost a third of the value of the farms.

Crackers Come Up With Pitching Youth Movement of Their Own

Sunday afternoon at Ponce de Leon Park:

First among the scenic attractions at the Cracker residence was the silver-tinted coiffure of Charley Hurth. The President of the league was just in from an evening in Birmingham, where he had seen in action Fred Sigler, quicker on the draw in Atlanta last week than movie sheriff Randolph Scott. . . . Upstairs we had lunch together—a hot dog and a bottle of pop.

Pretty soon came Massa Joe Engel, whose Chattanooga Lookouts are so young he won't let them leave town without a chaperone. "That'd make a good head line," Joe said when he saw Hurth saw into his lunch. "League president bites dog."

More pleasant to the Hurth eyes would be a line that read: "Southern Association attendance booms again." "We're not getting alarmed at all," the gentleman from New Orleans said. "Our only official reports so far have come on the first two series, and they were afflicted by cold weather and rain. . . . Sigler? We had nothing but the best reports on him from the Texas League. He only threw out four men down there last season. This thing here last week just seems to have been an exceptional occasion. . . . Yes, the league might be a bit stronger this season over all. We don't have that one weakling club. Little Rock is much better, of course. Mobile is improved. Atlanta seems to be about the same."

Chattanooga's kids are going to be interesting. But you don't know the true strength of a club until it has settled on its final lineup.

"And no club usually will be set for three or four weeks yet." The Cracker dressing room was a morgue. Jim Wood stopped by for a moment, and Trainer Lou Jarvis was lining up the towels, but the peons were out on the field. . . . Happy Jack Onslow was bouncing child star Ellis Clary on his knee in the dugout. He may have been bleeding inside, but the front he put up was first-class. . . . "Nothing wrong with this youth movement—yet," said the man who went several rounds with the Chicago White Sox. "Give me three men, and we'll be all right: A right fielder who can throw, a second baseman who can hit and another pitcher. Or, give me a good third baseman and I can send Clary back to second."

Birmingham Already Asking Waivers on Bobo?

There was a short pause while Happy Jack became dumfounded at the news he was to receive a baseball encyclopedia at home plate before the game. "Wal, I swear. . . . Best team I've seen is Atlanta, best-balanced, that is. They're getting good pitching and they got some outfielders who can go the ball. They may need another rightfielder, but that kid (Chuck Tanner) can run. . . . Naw, kids don't bother me. It's interesting to watch 'em develop. We might have a good combination by midsummer. Oh, we ain't gonna be knocking for any pennant, but we might be good. We haven't been out of but one ball game up to now, and that's a night I started a kid pitcher who was so nervous he couldn't throw hard."

Back in the dressing room, Dixie Walker was a bit gay about his rookie pitchers. Andy Elko, Howie Anderson, Joe Reardon and Elmer Thot have made themselves so much at home that there hasn't been much business for Al Hennebeck. Larry Lassalle and Walter Nothe. . . . They had won 10 of the Cracker's 12 victories going into the Sunday two-game set. "I just got my five starters going," Dixie said. "The four young fellows and Higbe and I hate to break it up while they're winning. Reardon pitched himself into the picture with that one-hitter. You've got to use a kid like that."

You could hear the noises—boxes of Dave Davenport and Buck Imlon, ancient and effective Western Union battery, going as you passed the hanging catwalk that led to the press box. . . . You heard that Birmingham already is asking waivers on Bobo Newman. Didn't seem that no such common fate should fall to the Great Man, but how much can the human arm endure?

Hitless Wonder Welteroth 2 for 2 After 0 for 22

One of Chattanooga's spring sensations, Bill Welteroth, out of Ohio University, was sent down, Allen (News-Free Press) Morris reported, after he stole third base and found another Lookout already there. "You couldn't blame the kid, there's the kindest hearted Angel said. 'He had such a good lead.' . . . Brooklyn asked for a price on the boy after this demonstration of Dodger potential."

As Pitcher Dick Welteroth came to bat looking for his first Southern Association hit (0 for 22 last year), it was observed that he hadn't had a hit in so long he had become one of the Lookouts' big threats. Every time he goes up, he has the law of averages working for him. . . . It worked first time Sunday, when Country Brown collaborated with him for a single. Welteroth lifted a fly that Country couldn't reach. Next time up, he planted one of those lazy daisies just in front of Brown. No hits a whole season, then two in two times up.

Had to hold up the first game in the sixth inning while Onslow went for bull pen catcher Hal Keller to pinch hit for Mel Kerestes. He had vanished to the dressing room, King-Kong Charley's brother then delivered a double. . . . From the press-box angle, there's strong similarity between profiles of old Cracker Willard Marshall and Lookout Joe Hazle, the Clemson alumnus Brooklyn signed out of college as a pitcher. Washington drafted him as an outfielder from Greenville, S. C.

Jake Donaldson just blew in. After a half-week of meteorological reverses, the vice president could fold up his umbrella. The game was past the five-inning deadline and he was in with his 2000 house.

Indians Bow In Twin Loss To Browns

Losing Nats Tie Tribe for Lead

ST. LOUIS, April 29—(AP) Everything happened and everyone had fun except Cleveland Sunday as the faltering St. Louis Browns swept both ends of a wild double-header from the mighty Indians before a colorful summertime crowd of 10,116. The Browns took the first game, 6-3; the second, 13-11.

Cleveland's losses dropped the club into a first-place tie with Washington. . . . Ned Garver gained his and the Browns' third victory of the season as he squeezed out of numerous tight places to capture the opener. The second game was a no-holds-barred affair in which Manager Al Lopez of the Indians called on five hurlers. Larry Doby cracked out his third homer and Al Rosen his first for the Indians in the nightcap.

Bums Hand Giants 11th Straight Defeat

BROOKLYN, April 29—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers sent the New York Giants reeling to their 11th straight defeat Sunday as they pounded out three home runs and a 6-3 victory. Duke Snider cracked two of the homers and Gil Hodges blasted the other, his sixth of the season.

The Dodgers broke a 2-2 tie with three runs in the sixth inning. Hodges accounted for the first two with his home run. Snider connected in the fourth inning for the first run of the game and completed the scoring with a mighty poke over the exit sign in center field, in the seventh.

Larry Jansen opened for the Giants and was charged with the loss, his third. Al Gettel and Dave Koslo were his relievers.

Carl Erskine started for Brooklyn but was replaced in the seventh by Clyde King. The Giants loaded the bases in the seventh with two out but King got pinch-hitter Ray Noble to ground out to end the threat.

Crackers Win Double Header

Atlanta Runs Victory String to 8 As Lookouts Tumble, 9-6, 7-4

By JESSE OUTLAR

Atlanta's cracking Crackers sparred around with Chattanooga in the early rounds of a double event Sunday before swinging late haymakers to kayo the kids, 9-6 and 7-4.

A partisan crowd of 9,195—second largest of the season at Ponce de Leon—roared approval as Dixie Walker's warriors stretched their victory skein to eight and took their fifth straight series. An Atlanta club hasn't enjoyed such prosperity since 1946. Last year's pennant winners reached their peak at seven.

Success was achieved in the first game in the eighth inning, when ex-Lookout Junior Wooten doubled three scores over during a three-run spurt. Al Aucoin's inside homer climaxed a four-run salvo in the sixth inning of the finale.

Luckily for the Crackers, the youngsters stuck their chin out. They left 11 runners stranded in the long game, and only two Atlanta runs were earned in the late affair.

The league leaders didn't profit from their four hours and thirty-eight minutes of successful labor. For Little Rock straggled two from Mobile and trails by a few points. The Travelers are a half-game ahead in the won-lost column, but percentage is the deciding factor.

Walter Nothe, veteran southpaw, celebrated his return to the active list with a relief victory in the first game. Andy Elko, the Class B graduate from Pensacola, wrapped up his fourth win in the afterpiece.

Elko, who may be Atlanta's first 20-game winner since '46, wasn't around at the finish. It took a one-pitch double-play relief job by Howard Anderson to quell a Chattanooga run in the seventh.

Charlie Williams carried the heavy stick with three licks in a 14-hit assault against first game. Aucoin, with his second homer of the year and a single, was the big bat man in the second. Kirby Higbe set the pattern of generosity that was to prevail by giving Chattanooga a run in the first inning.

Hig, first pitcher to falter in seven games, walked Dan Porter, and provided free passage

The second game was called at the end of the 10th because of Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew law. Wally Westlake, appearing as a pinchhitter, sent the game into extra innings as he homered in the ninth.

GOOD HEALTH IS IMPORTANT—Dr. Daniel B. Leigh, Atlanta chiropractor, operates the X-ray machine in his clinic at 40 Peachtree Pl., N. W., one of the most modern of its kind in the South. The patient is Mrs. Marion Oliver. For consultation call Dr. Leigh, AT. 4411.

FOR YOUNG AND OLD

Dr. Leigh Extends Popular Spring Health Clinic Here

More and more people, young and old, are realizing the benefits of chiropractic treatment, it was announced today by Dr. Daniel B. Leigh, well-known Atlanta chiropractor.

Responding to many requests, Dr. Leigh said that his special Spring clinic, originally set for a two-week period only, has been extended until May 15. This special clinic, a popular feature of Dr. Leigh's year-around health program, specializes in nervous and gas pains, headaches and ailments resulting from general toxic conditions.

"People frequently find themselves 'out of sorts' in the changing of the seasons," said Dr. Leigh. "In many cases, treatments at our clinic have proven highly effective in overcoming this feeling."

The doctor also pointed out that many businessmen, young and old, have been receiving relief from nervous tension and strain by having adjustments at his clinic.

"In these times of increased demands upon our nervous systems, relaxing adjustments can help the businessman meet the demands of our day with better health and increased efficiency because he will naturally feel better and be able to better respond to the various calls upon his time," says Dr. Leigh.

"And not just mature adults, but young and old alike can benefit from chiropractic adjustments," Dr. Leigh added.

Dr. Leigh, with the help of a competent staff, operates one of the most scientific and completely equipped drugless clinics in the South at 40 Peachtree Pl., N. W.

Among the items of modern equipment included in this clinic are a complete X-ray laboratory, the recently introduced Irwin intestinal lavage instruments for colon irrigation and a thermo-differential indicator which can detect the nerve pressure in the human body.

With these instruments the clinic is designed for the examination and treatments of chronic diseases. In addition, chiropractic, physiotherapy and hydrotherapy treatments are provided.

Through his wide research program Dr. Leigh has been successful in correcting gastro-intestinal disorders without surgery and in many cases those who have suffered for years have received relief.

Patients both young and old from all over the South have come to Dr. Leigh for treatment of chronic diseases such as toxic troubles, asthma, arthritis, sinusitis, high and low blood pressure, and many other ailments. Children suffering from convulsions and old people suffering from arthritis have both benefited from his treatments.

All cases are carefully diagnosed before treatment is begun regardless of the nature of the trouble. Complete X-rays are taken at the beginning of the treatment and the patient's improvement is charted throughout.

The clinic, which is located at 40 Peachtree Pl., N. W., is open each day from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Evening appointments as well as day appointments can be made by calling Dr. Leigh at ATwood 4411. Call him now while you are thinking about it, and get a good start on the way to good health and a happy outlook on life as a result of feeling your best.

Old Rifles Found By Texas Trapper

BURNET, Texas—(AP)—A number of old guns have been found scattered among the boulders of a natural rock fort near this center, Texas town. Apparently they mark the site of an Indian raid on a camp of white settlers. Donald Murchison was running his trap lines on the ranch of his father, Oscar Murchison, when he found the guns on the side of a rocky hill.

With the guns were iron cooking utensils and other items. Donald went for help. He returned and gathered nine flint lock rifles of varied size and length, minus stocks long exposed to the weather. A Spanish axe similar to present day pictures of Spanish tools was found, also scythe blades, an old wood auger, a pair of steel stirrups but no saddle, a Spanish spur, a bullet-mold, Indian grinding stones used in grinding grain, a cannon ball and various iron pots and a large brass key.

Rotation Saves Light Batteries

NEW HAVEN — (AP) — Rotate your flashlight batteries to make them last longer, suggests one of the nation's largest battery producers.

Increasing the life of your batteries will become more important as a conservation measure now that battery production is being reduced because of growing defense production. Rotation gets ultimate service out of dry cell flashlight batteries which are in daily use, according to W. S. Allen, general manager of the electrical division of Olin Industries, Inc., here. Users of two-cell flashlights, he says, should have a minimum of three sets of batteries and should change them every day for effective rotation.

H. Mendel Offers Retailers Loomcraft Mother's Day Special

Merchants See Loomcraft as Profit Maker

The manufacturers of the famous nationally advertised Loomcraft Slips and H. Mendel & Company, wholesale distributors, are bringing to Southeastern retailers this year what they consider to be the greatest promotional offering in the history of Mothers Day retailing.

Too much importance cannot be stressed on this slip promotion because it does so much both for the retailer and the consumer.

With Mothers Day now the second greatest merchandising date in the year (second only to Christmas), it behooves each merchant to take advantage of such specials offered him and pass it along to the customer. In these days the customer is still all-important.

One of the Loomcraft promotions is an attractively boxed slip. Each garment in one of these appealing cellophane-topped gift boxes makes a beautiful present. There is a cotton batiste number, heavily embroidered, and also a LOOMCRAFT has developed a wonder-fitting two-way strapless slip that is sweeping the country. A patent is pending on this garment, the feature of which is that the slip can be worn either strapless or with straps.

It can be had in both cotton and rayon to retail at $1.98 and $2.98. A beautiful electric flasher that is an eye-catching advertisement is supplied retail merchants free of charge with a minimum of three dozen of the two-way Loomcraft slips.

H. Mendel & Company has just issued a special Mothers Day booklet featuring many suggestions of other special gift and promotional items for this big event. A copy can be had on request.

Merchants interested in the special gift boxed Loomcraft Slips or in the two-way strapless promotion, can get full information by dropping the company a line or phoning.

The company stresses the extraordinary convenience offered its customers in the private parking facilities adjoining its building.

Morgan Agency Takes Pride in Service Records

The Roy F. Morgan Agency of Mutual of Omaha points with pride to the fact that the eight representatives of this agency in Georgia shown herewith, have served an aggregate of 150 years with the company.

Mutual of Omaha is the largest exclusive accident and health company in the world and operates throughout every state in the entire United States and also in Canada, Hawaii, Newfoundland and Alaska. Since its founding 48 years ago, Mutual of Omaha has paid considerably more than two hundred million dollars in benefits to its policyowners throughout the country and in Georgia alone during 1950 a total of more than $100,000 each month was paid to Georgia people unfortunate enough to be stricken by sickness or accident.

The sales help provided through the payment of these many claims, together with the tremendous impact of national radio and television advertising featuring Bob Considine, combined with considerable magazine and newspaper advertising, serves to make the name of Mutual of Omaha familiar to every ear and serves also to do a considerable job of pre-selling before the interview.

One of the main reasons why representatives of Mutual of Omaha found it so easy to carve for themselves a real permanent and profitable career is the fact that this company and the Roy F. Morgan Agency also accords a policy of service to the policyowner in paying local claims promptly with the least possible delay and a minimum of red tape. A tremendous opportunity is offered a person who may choose an insurance profession with Mutual of Omaha because of the variety of coverages offered by this company. In offering a complete, up-to-date line of hospitalization contracts, disability income plans, life insurance and even fire insurance, Mutual of Omaha feels that it is in a position to provide service not only for the policyowner, but also for the representatives in the field.

The Roy F. Morgan Agency maintains complete facilities for training the new employee in his sales work so that there is no delay in the very best sales efforts of this person.

Many of the representatives with the Roy F. Morgan Agency were formerly in the accident and health business, but a great many have achieved their success after having been associated in sales effort with entirely different lines. If you are interested in a permanent and profitable career with Mutual of Omaha, a letter, postcard or telephone call to the Roy F. Morgan Agency, 6th floor William - Oliver Building, CYPRESS 5891, Atlanta, Georgia, will bring you full details.

Runaway Car Injures Window Sitter Here

Atlanta auto traffic toll included a man pinned to the inside of a structure and 11 others sent to Grady Hospital for treatment of injuries.

Jessie Ponder, 65-year-old Negro, of 412 Markham St., S. W., was seated inside a window on Ella Street, N. E., police reported, when an apparently driverless auto rolled down the street, jumped the curb, smashed through the window and pinned Ponder to the wall.

The luckless victim was treated at Grady for a fractured left arm, back injuries and lacerations of the right hand.

Burton S. Temple, 27, of a veterans hospital at Oteen, N. C., suffered lacerations of the forehead in a follow-the-pusher sort of crash involving four cars, police said.

3 Georgians Are Killed In Traffic

A motorcycle carrying three riders collided with an automobile on the streets of Dublin Sunday, killing one of the riders and bringing to three the number of Georgians killed on highways over the weekend.

Donald W. Butler, 31, of Danville, was killed in the Dublin collision and two others injured. Monroe suffered fractures of the shoulder and collar bones and shock. Edwin Green, 26, of Montrose, sustained chest injuries.

A woman hitchhiker from Georgia was fatally injured by a car that didn't stop. Florida Highway patrolmen reported.

Beatrice Reynolds, 43, of Rte. 3, Rome, died in a hospital in Tampa Sunday.

CAR INJURY LIST

Grady records showed two other Atlantans treated for injuries suffered on Highway 42, near Conley. They were listed as Hazel Louise Ballentine, 30, of 32 Crumley St., S. W., lacerated forehead, chest and side injuries, and Johnny J. Hutchins, 24, of 330 Crew St., S. W., chest injury.

Sidney Lanier Walker, 31, of Fayetteville, was treated for chest injuries and lacerations suffered on Juniper St., N. E.

Grady records showed Wade L. Bagley, 33, of 848 Brookline St., S. W., was treated for minor injuries received on Sylvan Rd. Sam D. Hunt, 23, of 1026 Piedmont Ave., N. E., suffered abrasions and an abdomen injury at Peachtree St. and 17th St., N. E., according to hospital records.

Edwin F. Cross, 28, was treated for lacerations received at Beecher Rd. and Beecher Cir., S. W.

FALLS FROM CARS

Two Atlanta children were hurt when they fell from moving cars, according to Grady records. They were listed as Edward Williams, 2, son of Mrs. Joyce Williams of 3489 Whipple Ave., East Point, who suffered abrasions when he fell from a car moving at 40 miles per hour and Aiden Wright, 2, son of Blaine Wright of 652 Grand Ave., N. E., who suffered head, arm and leg injuries when he fell from a car moving at 15 miles per hour.

BOTTLE EXPLODES

The day also had its share of unusual accidents. According to Grady records, Theodore Buice, 26, of 184 Olympic Pl., S. W., suffered cuts when a bottle exploded in his hand at a restaurant where he works.

Thomas C. Lewis, 36, of 322 Ponce de Leon Ave., N. E., said a cat bit him on the hand and a resident of Oak Street, S. W., said she also was bitten—by her niece.

A resident of Pulliam Street, S. W., asked to be treated for a lacerated finger on his right hand.
